Shearings Holidays also introduced a new 15-day British Heritage Trail, which includes accommodation in luxury hotels and costs £1200 per person. An expert guide accompanies the tour and travel is on 'Grand Tourer' coaches with higher seats, adjustable foot rests and free WiFi.

Il Ngwesi Eco-Lodge

The Il Ngwesi Ranch is Maasai owned land in a region of Kenya containing unique wildlife. It is home to half of Kenya's black rhinoceros population and 70% of the world's total population of Grevy's zebra.

In 1994 the Maasai community set aside 80% of their land for wildlife conservation. The ranch is now an international role model for community-based land and wildlife conservation. The local Maasai people are committed to sharing their culture with guests.

Rhino sanctuary

The conservation area includes a rhino sanctuary, the only one of its kind in the world. Rhinos are close to extinction and there are plans to expand the sanctuary. It requires 16 full-time rangers to monitor and protect the rhinos from poachers. Maintaining the conservation area is expensive.

The eco-lodge

The ranch also has an award winning eco-lodge built of local materials. It is owned and managed by the local Maasai community.

Open air room made with local materials.

Guests stay in rooms that are open to the bush so they can see and enjoy the sights and sounds of the wildlife. Each room has been crafted with local materials. There are showers with hot water, heated by solar power.

Income from the lodge directly supports community projects such as improved healthcare and education.

Maasai staff

Guests are looked after by a team of local Maasai. Joseph, the chef, prepares local and international cuisine and James, a world renowned nature enthusiast and wildlife expert, is one of the bush walk guides. James' knowledge ensures that guests can safely view the wildlife at close range. The guides explain the importance of plants to their community and tell ancient Maasai stories.

Crafts and culture

The craft shop was opened to create extra income. Guests can buy genuine Maasai items made by the local women, including jewellery.

A training project adds to the traditional skills of the Maasai and helps them to sell their items overseas. The income raised is helping to support their families, pay school fees and some has been invested in new businesses.

Electric bikes 'flatten hills' and give visitors the chance to choose a green form of transport on which to enjoy the countryside without too much effort.

Leisure and tourism organisations such as visitor attractions, cafes, hotels, retailers and existing cycle hire companies are being asked to consider becoming a location where cyclists can hire the electric bikes and/or recharge their bikes' battery.
