The regulating of smoking in all our hotel apartments from 15/1/ 2008

After the success of the previous phases of regulating smoking in all shopping malls, restaurants, cafes and shops, Dxxx municipality is pleased to announce the launch of the 3rd phase by regulating smoking in all hotels and hotel apartments in Dxxx. This is being done due to its keenness to protect public health and prevent the damage to the health of non-smokers.

Dxxx Municipality hopes everybody will comply with this and contribute towards the accomplishment of this objective.

SECTION B: PRESENTING SELF

Materials for Question 5

Text A is a transcript of a conversation between a woman (K) and her mother-in-law (A). K is talking in A's flat about her recent attempts to find a new job.

Text A

Key to transcription conventions

(.) micro pause

(2) timed pause

/ overlapping speech

[laughs] paralinguistic features

A: um (.) what have we got what what sort of tea do you want

K: er either if you're making a pot of that I'll just have that that's completely fine um (.) yes so hopefully something in that respect will /

A: / well that's good

5 K: I don't want to just have a minimum wage job (2) it's terrible they're making me do that

A: I know (1)

K: I honestly do believe it's an America thing

A: what

10 K: well I'm sure (.) being an American and a woman didn't help with my tattoo job that's (.) I mean Jonny and I have been talking about it and I honestly believe that it's more of a matter of (.) as respectful as I was and as hardworking as I was I didn't think he was (.) the best thing that happened to y'know retail industry ever whatever like I I don't know

A: didn't they say that the bottom line was time keeping

15 K: well yeah yes of course [laughs] but there's plenty of people who are late there who do think he's the bees knees and aren't fired so (.) y'know (.) at the end of the day the tattooists are late any time (.) the wife drives in from Manchester she's hours late so I mean I know that's his wife but I'm saying /

A: / right

20 K: y'know Helen's been late hours late had to leave cos she's completely hungover and as much as he's chided her like crazy /

A: / yeah /

K: / she's not fired

A: yeah but these are tattooists

K: no

25 A: oh

K: no they're just retail clerks so I'm saying the fact of the matter is I don't know if I'm American or a woman or an American woman but /

A: / right /

30 K: / the bottom line is I don't think I kissed his ass enough and I'm not gonna right I mean if I work hard for you yeah it sucks that I'm late that's really bad luck but like (.) and and you'd think he'd be a little more understanding because of the flooding and everything obviously one of the days was after the flooding one of the days was me being in traffic like crazy on the way into town past the Wicker so like (2)

A: yeah

35 K: it just didn't make any sense (.) the good thing is it freed me up to go on this interview and other interviews and I was having a hard time looking for other stuff with working so much and /

A: / yeah /

K: / having the kids those two days so I mean we'll see we'll see (3)

40 A: I found the kids a bit a bit difficult last night

K: oh did you [laughs]

Call for an inquiry in to Iraq War (again...)

So the Tories have called for an inquiry in to the Iraq War, oh how opportunistic of them. Do I sense an election on the way? Of course I do! Perhaps they would like to erase from history
10 the fact that 146 of their MPs voted in favour of the war from the outset, or, because they have a new sparkling leader, does that automatically mean that they can change their opinions?

Plaid has been consistent in calling for an inquiry, and Adam Price's campaign to Impeach Tony Blair was positive in that it sought to mobilise the peace movement in a common campaign goal. Nevertheless, these calls have fallen flat, and the Government still do not believe that it is 'the 15 right time' for an inquiry, when 'our troops' are fighting on the ground (and are losing morale if the latest poll of families of servicemen is anything to go by)

The Lib dems have put in an amendment to the Tory motion, asking all MPs who voted for the War to apologise. I don't see anything wrong with this, but unfortunately I don't see MPs offering to apologise in a hurry. Apologies are not that common in politics because politicians 20 don't like being wrong, or being seen to be wrong even if they know they are!

Miliband is still in denial that the war was even a mistake, regardless of the fact that even some of George Bush's most ardent supporters in America now recognise that yes, they were, (gulp) wrong to occupy Iraq.

An Independent inquiry is desperately needed to assess the war on every level- from clarity on 25 the reasoning for war, to the action taken on a ground level, to the continuation of US/ British intervention in Iraq, to seeking to restore faith from the electorate in the political system. Until the London Government acknowledges this, I do not see how they can seek to even address their waning credibility.
