Jimmy is 85 years of age and lives on his own. He has a condition called Parkinson's Disease which he has had for the past 20 years. The symptoms of his condition are tremors, muscle stiffness and slowness in physical movement. Once a week he visits the outpatient clinic where a physiotherapist encourages him to do gentle exercises to maintain his muscle tone. He also sees an occupational therapist who regularly assesses his functional ability. Jimmy's social worker reviews his care plan which currently consists of:

- daily home care services
- transport to the hospital on a weekly basis
- meals on wheels daily.

As Jimmy has no relatives who can support him, his social worker has been discussing with him the possibility of moving into residential accommodation.

(a) Identify and describe two benefits that moving into residential accommodation may have on Jimmy's health and well-being.

Jimmy is considering moving to the Willows Residential Care Home. The home accommodates 24 residents all of whom are quite mobile and enjoy a good level of independence. The staff and residents in the home have a good relationship. Residents are encouraged to take ownership of their daily routines and activities. Each resident has a named nurse. The home also organises monthly meetings when residents can voice their opinions on issues such as care, menus and activities. The staff are currently organising a trip to a National Trust park which the residents have suggested.

(a) Jimmy will be assigned a named nurse if he moves into the residential home.

Explain the role of a named nurse.
