General Comments

There was a very small entry this series but the following issues are still causing problems and centres should take note of them before submitting work for the summer series

The unit is about social issues and welfare needs and, as such, health issues are not appropriate: these fall under the remit of Unit 6 and centres should be careful to avoid them when directing learners. This direction towards health issues was the biggest single reason that candidates were struggling with accessing the assessment criteria. When choosing topics it is often worth identifying government responses and demographic factors associated with the issue before embarking on the report.

Assessment Objective 1

Candidates generally used a wide range of different sources. As a general point, candidates should use the inception of the welfare state as a starting point for this assessment objective, thus reduces the tendency to submit irrelevant and long historical descriptions.

Assessment Objective 2

When deciding which issue to do, candidates should consider whether there are enough appropriate demographic factors associated with it to enable them to access mark band 3 before embarking on their coursework. Candidates are still writing this section as a generic description of demographic factors they should be applying the effect of the demographic factors on the issue they are doing about.

Assessment Objective 3

Good knowledge of the contemporary nature of the issue was shown by many candidates but little analysis of work-related issues was shown. The work-related issues can be considered from any relevant viewpoint: this may be the effect on employers (e.g. the army when considering suicide in young men), the affected group themselves, workers within that group (e.g. counsellors working with young men, issues for primary teachers when considering childhood poverty).

Assessment Objective 4

Description of government strategies was seen in nearly all cases but the attempts at evaluating the strategies was generally badly done. A lot of descriptive information was seen, and many candidates had poorly referenced information they had sourced on the internet, they need to be encouraged to reference all such information.
