(This is for part (a)) During the Second world War, the activities of the radical socialist Subhas Chandra Bose appeared to stir fear & threat through their extreme nature. The top secret report made by the British Military Intelligence Service outlines these activities and the extent of the threat posed by them. In this sense, the source holds value immense value, especially in the context of the Second World War.

~~Bose is said~~ In the report, Bose is said to have "finally" revealed his "true intention" towards the British Raj through his newfound association with Germany & Japan. Indeed, after leaving Congress, Bose set out to completely remove the British administration from India, and ~~felt~~ felt a significant way to do this was work with Britain's enemies during the ~~last~~ Second World War. With the aid of the "military success of the Japanese", Bose aimed to gradually infiltrate India with his extreme ~~idea~~ anti-British ideology, hoping to eventually paralyse British rule in India through "internal revolt". These observations of the clear threat of Bose during the "economic distress" of

(This is for part (a)) "Political deadlock" in India at the time convey the undoubtedly immense threat of Bose's ~~extreme~~ radical activities with Germany & Japan. From this, the ~~same~~ ^{report} displays value in its recognition of these activities, their threat & the scale of ~~these threats~~ ^{this threat}, ~~which was~~ to the political situation in India, which was in fact "small".

~~The honesty & unbiased nature of the~~ ~~report~~ The fact that the report ~~is~~ ^{is} top secret contributes to this value though how the view illustrated ~~was~~ is most likely not one illustrated ~~to the~~ publicly at the time. This ~~gives~~ ^{gives} an honest ~~to~~ [&] ~~the same~~ truthful tone to the source that otherwise wouldn't be displayed during the difficult ~~struggling times~~ times of the Second World War. Additionally, the report was created by a branch of the British Military Intelligence Service, ~~which may appear~~ highlighting the apparent importance & threat of Bose's activities during the Second World War; they were ~~something that~~ ^{even the} activities that needed concern.

furthermore, ~~as at~~ a large amount of value can be applied to the source ~~though~~ due to its
