

What is www.thepsychologyfaculty.org? The Psychology Faculty is a new, free educational resource for secondary schools and especially A-level English students and teachers. With the support of JISC (part of the Higher Education Funding Council for England), we provide short films of university lecturers speaking on topics from the A-level Psychology curriculum.

In bringing the expertise of research scholars into the classroom, we want to encourage deeper learning, stretch and inspire students and help them make a successful transition to university. In addition to the podcasts, there is information that helps students compare University Psychology departments across the country and choose the best one for them. The site also shows prospective students what sorts of careers follow a Psychology degree. There is information on top UK recruiters of Psychology graduates.

We now have over 50 podcasts on the site, and many more will follow in the coming weeks. Please bookmark the site and follow us on Twitter. Your comments and suggestions are important to us and we will incorporate them in producing our forthcoming video podcasts. Complete our survey and you will be automatically entered into a draw for an iPad II.

The more students and teachers use the site, the more new podcasts we'll be able to make so please visit us now.

Dr. James Harris
University of Leeds
Director, The Faculties
james@thefaculties.com

NB: Some LEA web filters block any new content that has not been specifically requested by teachers. If you receive "access denied" messages on a school computer, it may be necessary to contact your LEA webmaster or web filter team. Alternatively, you can contact me at the above email.