

MFL A level specification mapping grid:

Edexcel to Edexcel

Our new A levels will inspire learners and give them skills for life, enabling them to use language independently and encouraging a deeper understanding of the integration between language and culture. A variety of themes will cater for a range of student interests, and our qualifications will support students who see languages as a skill to enhance career or travel prospects, as well as those who want to continue to study languages at a higher level. The new A levels will be taught from September 2016. We're here to help you in the run up to change and during the implementation of the new specifications. To help you compare specifications, please consult the summary below.

Key changes to A level – common to all awarding organisations

- Standalone AS qualification (no longer counting towards the A level)
- Compulsory literature and/or film
- Independent research project assessed through the A level oral
- Critical and analytical thinking assessed through essay in target language
- Translation into and out of the target language
- Summarising information from spoken and written sources
- Renewed focus on culture with a specific assessment objective (AO4) to assess knowledge and understanding of the TL culture
