Question 1

When they leave school, young people have a difficult choice to make. They can either go to university or start to earn a living. I am glad to have become an apprentice electrician. At the end of my training, I obtained a useful qualification and, unlike many of my friends, I did not have any debts. At first, I worked for a large firm which repaired industrial machines. Then, after three years, I was able to found my own company and took on two other people. After completing each contract, we ask our customers to fill in a questionnaire. Their replies show that they are satisfied with what we have done.
