SECTION A: TRANSLATION

1 Aşağıdaki parçayı Türkçeye çevirin.

Internal migration in Turkey begins after the War of Independence. Atatürk's agricultural policy draws the urban population to rural areas. After the fifties, the increase in the population in villages causes more division of inherited land. Those who are struggling to make a living go to the cities to find jobs. Developments in industry and technology, better communication and transportation, easy access to health and education services all make cities more attractive. At the same time development of villages slows down. The challenges of adapting to urban life cause cultural problems. Rapid urbanization increases the number of houses and environmental pollution.
