QAN: 603/0252/5	Title: Pearson BTEC Level 3 National Extended Certificate in Production Arts (360GLH)

Overview

The production arts sector

The production arts are a key part of the creative and cultural industries in the UK. Production arts cover set design and construction, costume, make-up, sound, lighting, stage management, production management, arts administration and multimedia.

Who is this qualification for?

The Pearson BTEC Level 3 National Extended Certificate in Production Arts is intended as an Applied General qualification. It is designed for post-16 students with an interest in production arts who want to continue their education through applied learning and who aim to progress to higher education and ultimately to employment, possibly in the production arts sector. The qualification is equivalent in size to one A level and is designed to occupy one-third of a typical two-year full-time study programme, which could include other vocational or academic qualifications, such as another BTEC National or A levels. This qualification gives a broad introduction to the production arts sector, with an emphasis on core knowledge and fundamental skills that are transferable across other sectors.

No prior study of the sector is needed, but students should normally have a range of achievement at level 2, in GCSEs or equivalent qualifications.

What does the qualification cover?

The content of this qualification has been developed in consultation with academics to ensure that it supports progression to higher education. In addition, employers and professional bodies have been involved and consulted, in order to confirm that the content is appropriate and consistent with current practice.

The qualification provides the knowledge, understanding and skills that will prepare students for further study or training.

Everyone taking this qualification will study three mandatory units, covering the following content areas:

- research – students will develop critical analysis and extended writing skills to support their progression to higher education. As possible future practitioners, students will gain a good understanding of the work of influential practitioners to inform their own work and practice
- production skills and techniques – students will develop the appropriate backstage production skills and techniques needed when supporting a live performance
- production design and realisation – students will develop an understanding of the purpose of design in live productions, and will design a production element to meet the requirements of a design brief.

Students select one option unit to support their progression to production arts and other courses in higher education. The option units cover content areas such as:

- crewing for performance
- programming and operating lights for performance
- make-up application for performance.

What could this qualification lead to?

Will the qualification support progression to further learning, if so, what to?

Students who have completed this qualification in a year may progress to further learning at level 3, for example, to a larger size BTEC National in Production Arts.

In addition to the production arts sector-specific content outlined above, the requirements of the qualification will mean that students develop transferable and higher-order skills, which are highly regarded by higher education providers and employers. For example, when studying the 'Investigating Production Arts Practitioners' Work' unit students will develop the skills essential for further study, including research, independent learning, extended writing, sourcing, evaluating information and drawing conclusions.

The qualification carries UCAS points and is recognised by higher education providers as contributing to admission requirements for many courses such as:

- BA (Hons) Theatre Production
- BA (Hons) Event Management

- BA or Bsc (Hons) Business Studies
- BA (Hons) Stage Management.

It can give context to subjects that would benefit from some sector background and be taken as part of a diverse programme, leaving progression options fully open. When combined with other qualifications within a two-year study programme, such as AS/A levels or another BTEC National, students can progress into higher education, for example to:

- BA (Hons) in Design, if taken alongside AS/A levels in English Literature and Art
- Bsc (Hons) in International Management with Spanish, if taken alongside A levels in Spanish and Maths
- BA (Hons) in Media, if taken alongside Film and Television Production.

Students should always check the entry requirements for degree programmes at specific higher education providers.

Will the qualification lead to employment, if so, in which job role and at which level?

This qualification, when studied with other level 3 qualifications, is designed primarily to support progression to employment following further study at university. However, it can also support students progressing to employment directly, or via an apprenticeship. It will give successful students the transferable knowledge, understanding and skills that will be an advantage when applying for a range of industry linked training programmes, or apprenticeships in the production arts sector or another sector of their choice.

Why choose this size of qualification?

If there are larger and/or smaller versions of this qualification, or it is available at different skills levels, why should the student choose this one?

The Pearson BTEC Level 3 National Extended Certificate in Production Arts is equivalent in size to one A level. It is for students interested in learning about the sector alongside other fields of study, with a view to progressing to a wide range of higher education courses, but not necessarily in production arts.

The suite also includes the following qualifications.

The Pearson BTEC Level 3 National Foundation Diploma in Production Arts, which is equivalent in size to 1.5 A levels and is for students looking for a one-year course of full-time study, or alongside another area of study that contrasts or complements the qualification over a two-year full-time study programme.

The Pearson BTEC Level 3 National Diploma in Production Arts, which is equivalent in size to 2 A levels. It typically makes up two-thirds of a two-year full-time 16–19 study programme, and is normally taken alongside other qualifications. The additional qualification(s) studied allow students either to give breadth to their study by choosing a contrasting subject, or to give their studies more focus by choosing a complementary subject.

The Pearson BTEC Level National Extended Diploma in Production Arts, which is equivalent in size to 3 A levels and is typically the major qualification in a two-year full-time 16–19 study programme. It allows students to focus their study on this sector with a view to progression to a production arts degree, or directly into the production arts sector.
