I have looked at buildings in hope to capture the theatre of environments and monumental. Though I hope that people have different environments that they live in and look up to, the majority of these places are monotonous. To explore this, I have visited various buildings worldwide. I visited some of them, like the British Museum and the Buildings of the designers of the world. From the photos of my buildings, I can see how people use different materials and forms to create their environments. I have focused a range of buildings, such as the church, which is fragmented all the way, yet it lies in the space.
