This Photography Component 2 submission consists of screenshots from a digital portfolio, which includes a series of printed outcomes, referenced within this presentation. Images of the work selected here reflect the characteristics of work in the middle of Performance Level 5 with an overall mark of 56/72.

At the start of the digital sketchbook the candidate considers how they will respond to the externally set assignment of 'Lock'. They produce a visual mind map of areas they could study by finding secondary source images online. They state that they wish to pursue the idea of 'Escapism' as a sub-theme. Photography, film and literature are researched by the candidate and help form some initial ideas for exploration.

The candidate completes a series of photoshoots starting with the topic 'dysmorphia'. Images of a model are taken in a darkened room with cling film used at times to represent someone being trapped inside their own body. Mood, lighting and composition are all considered. Contact sheets are produced, and the candidate indicates which images are the strongest and most appropriate to be developed. Annotation is consistent throughout the project.

Images are manipulated using digital photo editing software. Exposure and contrast are altered and at times the candidate combines imagery. Bars are added to an image of a girl screaming to enhance the feeling of being trapped.

For another photoshoot, the candidate projects an image of a skeleton onto the bare skin of someone's back. During another ink is dropped into water, the dispersing colours representing a chemical reaction. A diverse range of ideas are explored as the comprehensive project progresses. There is a constant cycle of photoshoot, selection, edit, review. The candidate continues to refer to and analyse the work of others throughout their creative journey. Clear visual links can be seen to these sources such as the 'Sanctuary' photoshoot inspired by the work of Van Gogh. Links are made through mood, tone and colour.

Finally, the candidate selects images for presentation by placing them in themed groups sharing their thoughts again through relevant annotation. The images selected show a convincing control of the formal elements through photography and digital media. Several images are chosen to be printed at A3 size on glossy paper.

For the submission to be placed at the top of Performance Level 5, the candidate would need to take greater risks within their work. Recording could also be more advanced in terms of technical skill.

#1 NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLER

This is the journey of surviving through poetry this is the blood sweat tears of twenty-one years this is my heart in your hands this is the hurting the loving the breaking

the healing

'its a rare condition in this day and age to read any good news 'on the newspaper page'

Hallk and hones

Rupi Kaur's milk and honey is a collection of prose and poetry that explores themes of silence, abuse, womanhood, family, connections and personal power. Kaur divides the work into four sections--hurting, loving, breaking, and healingthat mirror the poet's growth.What i like about this book is how it takes us as a reader through the different stages of grief this person is feeling- in a-lot of my work i like to follow a story instead of jumping between different ideas and i think using this structure i could work around it showing the different stages of someones life.

it took me while to try and find a photo which really describes what i want my work to look like as a whole. Yet i came across this collection of photos when looking through Pinterest . These photos were taken by Edward Steichen who was a Luxembourg-born American artist and gallerist who was a key figure in the development of photography. His work focuses a-lot on night and evening hours.

In an interview he stated that 'what a beautiful hour of the day is that of twilight when things disappear and seem to melt into each-other and a great beautiful feeling of peace overshadows all'- This quote in other words is talking about how the night and darkness blankets us in its shadows. Instead of being stereotyped as a unsettling night.

The message i get from this group of photos is that of exploring the world and a way to escape it reality. All of the photos remind me a-lot of dreams mainly through the way they have been made for example-The photo of the buildings- was taken at an angle low down as if we,as viewer, are looking up ourselves. As well as this the lighting is low and foggy- dreamy. Another thing i picked was the theme of refection- This is shown in the two starred photos- it also adds to the idea of escapism as if there are two different bodies we live in one physically and one mentally. I think deep diving into mental heath and feeling trapped in your won body would be very good for the overall theme of lock.

Room is a 2015 drama film directed by Lenny Abrahamson based on her 2010 novel of the same name. It stars Brie Larson as a young woman who has been held captive for seven years and whose five-year-old son was born in captivity. Their escape allows the boy to captivity. Their escape allows the boy to experience the outside world for the first time. I have chosen to use this film as my movie for this trichotomary as i believe it shows such a wide variety of adatptations and that it relates to the theme 'lock' both literally and mentally.

The use of the widnow being the only light source in this fil is such good way of showing 'the light in the darkness'. In my canva i would like to include lots of window work as well as the use of mirrors and showing reflections both as a source of escape. The phto i have chosen to represent the film shows exactly how i want my photos to feel- i want them to all show longing and desperation as if someone is trying toleave the pit of darkness that they have got put in. This film takes us thrugh the journey of how the mother plans to ecape the room and in desperation tells her son to fake his death in order for him to have the opportunity to live a life free of captitity. This part of the film has so much hope and love in it and although this contrats to the trauma of being trapped etc. i believe that 'wanting' to escape is a very key part of this whole story i am trying to show. Whilst my canva will go through th whole thought procrss of someone struggling to escape someone or them selves this film shows the base of exactly what i am trying to show for the theme 'lock'

my initial feelings about all these three things working together is the idea of longing. and escape By this i mean each of them have an idea of wanting more in order to reach a fantasy that they cant necessarily reach- unrealistic goal but provides a feeling of comfort .In the book and the movie they have both experienced a trauma in which flooded them with emotions. in order to overcome this trauma each of them have looked beyond the past and reminisce about the future. In order to show this in my work i am going to show the contrast between effects trauma and a way to escape reality. For trauma i want to start with showing how people are trapped in there own body and idea of struggling to escape ones mental healththis can also relate to the key word 'lock 'as it shows how people are physically trapped. I can incorporate lots of emotion and feelings from people in this part as well. Although to show the idea of fantasy i want to shoot photos that come across as dreamy instead of realistic so it seems more like a shoot of healing and peace rather than it all being about trauma, fot this i will show the beauty and effects of nature, as well as showing lots of window and mirror photography. This way i am capturing how people are feeling but through different perspectives so that it can feel more abstract and creative as well as relatable to the viewers following the structure of my book 'milk and honey' i would like my canva to follow a story of someone's life and by using these 3 influences i believe i can show

dysmorphia is my first shoot based of my trichotomy. This shoot shows the idea of someone being physically trapped in their own emotions/body. It can represent feelings of body dysmorphia or mental health as well as an overall atmospheric feeling of being trapped-lacking an escape route. Its mood is dull and eerie with shades of blue and varies with black. as well as neutral skin tones with dismophed photos of someone's bare back for my first shoot i wanted to stay simple and i focused on the idea of being physically trapped in your own body. I did this by using cling film and wrapping it around someone's body and face- pressing into there skin making it look the are being held back/pulled somewhere they don't want to be. I took these photos at night and used a black backdrop so i could shine a torch on the face of the girl- making it the centre of attention for the viewers. I really lie how literal these photos are-compared to just using a facial expression to represent how someone is feeling inside. It really metaphorically shows what people may be feeling inside.

for these light edits i grouped together 3 photos that were very similar- but different in there own way. i wanted to make all these photos black white so they look more non naturalistic than real. To edit these i lowered the exposure down so there s a full focus on on the bare back. I also turned up the sharpness so the detail's of the ribs and bone structure were very defined instead of making it a a blur. This triptych of photos don't necessarily show the feeling of being 'physically' trapped literally using plastic but instead more on the idea of being mentally stuck. This was one of the ideas i talked about in my 'create' which i want to explore further in the rest of my work. These edits really remind me of the movie 'fractured' where a 'dad's little girl' is pushed into a pit by a wolf, when in reality this man is hallucinating things after he kills his daughter and wife. He has taken a random patient out of the hospital and driven away. Joanne and Peri are dead and are in the boot of the car. While Ray imagines talking to his wife, he's merely talking to himself while a sick patient is dying in his back seat. The tension in the back represents fractures and stress which link to the psychological fracture the dad has.

did based of my previous light edit- i wanted to add something to the background of this photo as it is very plain and dark . As the shoot is all about escape i wanted to add the bars of my second shoot to represent the stereotypical 'escape from prison'. I really like however that the screaming girl is actually infront of the bars and not behind- ultimately this can show how even if someone had escaped physically from there place of hostage it dosent let the person escape the mental trauma that has been created from it in the first

shoot review

this shoot was very short compared to my other one but i think the idea came across very strong- this is not one of my favourite shoots as it reminds me a-lot of my foundation work when using projectors on bodies- i wanted to show the same idea as the last one by being physically trapped within your own body but this time i was showing being trapped in your own skin rather than your skin being trapped in clingfilm etc. to achive this i used a projector which showed images of skeletons and different patterns to try and represent how a person is feeling inside rather than on the outside and i think the abstractness of this shoot really helps

chemical reaction is a very abstract shoot based on the idea of chemical reactions in the mind- I am here trying to show how someone can feel through trauma and abuse by not showing obvious ohotos but more ones with thought invloved. To take this shoot I used ink and blank backrounds and simply let the ink do its thing- I wanted to capture it without interference to make the photos feel more alive (like inside someones mind)

" it will have blood they say: blood will have blood".

The loving part 2

I really love this photo and I would love to try and move m work down a people direction a some point. I really lo the colour pallet of th photo it a perfect mixture of golden yellow and a rose, pearly pink. The photo as a whole has a mor blissful and peacefu version of an 'escape' say escape due to the fact the women is trapped in a light piece of fabric and her fac expression shows a sense of fear but also awe. I think the way the camera was positioned was very good as well as it feels as if we are trapped in the fabric with her- as its been thrown towards the camera. its quite an ambiguous photo in that it could be representing how she is hiding from light and being blanketed from its beams or could show a sense of escape and wanted to find the light. either way i absolutely love this photo and would love to try something similar in my future work.

this is an album called' if you want' by London gramma with a collection of 17 songs. One song i particularly like is 'hey now'- the song itself is very calm and uses a range of slow and peaceful instruments to portray a a very sad but blissful song. some of the lyrics i thought related to my work very well are 'letters burning under my bed for you' and 'for you imagination calling mirrors for you'. Th use of speaking about mirrors and the idea of drifting into your imagination is exactly what i want to show in my work.Not only this i was drawn to the album cover.The photo of the people has been layered with what seems like a textured image of some sort.The photo itself is very blurry and there looks like there is a beam of light reflecting onto the peoples faces wether this is the sun or just an artificial glow i really like how all of these different parts to the photo work together.

Everything i ever wanted is a shoot i took in order to show the process of healing as as a result of trauma. i focused on using light as a feeling of tranquil and peacefulness—as well as a sense of comfort, this shoot was taken in my own home and i found the places i which i love most about my house-this is a good example of 'loving' and 'healing' in my trichotmery where i am showing how one overcomes a period of suffering and heads towards the light in the darkness although i wanted this one to feel more simpler and focused it all in one room. To start of with i picked the moment during the day were the sun was at its goldenest point.I then proceeded to close all the blinds but leaving faint strips of light in between them- so beams of the sun would shine through.I then scanned the room for any places where the sun created silhouettes and shadows of different objects. In order to enhance this goldeness i used some artificial light to boost the colour- by turning on small lamps and hiding them in between objects. In some of these photos i have taken photos of a window as well - i did this in order to show the idea of how someone is being trapped in a room- and all they can do is stare at how pretty the outside is in awe of its beauty). This idea also related to my trichotomary- of the film 'room' and the idea of windows. Following along with this shoot i will be looking more into windows and its meaning towards different people- wether a way of escape of just a 'thing' in someones house.

the place where one lives permanently, especially as a member of a family or household.

HOME?

this photo is taken of a stairwell at around the time where the sun was nearly set- i was really intrigued by how eerie and daunting it looked to me- i love the fat that the stairs have become a silhouette and all we can see is its outline- the darkness to me wether it be my home feels very unfamiliar. To light edit this i simply just turned down the exposure and enhanced the shadows- which bought out the individual lines on the staircase-defining them

the place where one lives permanently, especially as a member of a family or household.

i really like this photo as its very simplistic but has a stronger meaning then probably all of my other photos in the shoot. Although the photo is very dark you can still faintly see the silhouette of a hand pulling apart the blinds which reveals a really nice background where the sun has taken the spotlight. This is definitely what i what a-lot of my photos to portray following my last shoot i wanted to keep in the concept of windows- This time i decided to go outside my house and look for windows in the daylight that captured my eye. When i was out at a restaurant I came across this restaurant which had a very simplistic atmosphere .

but i really liked the general theme that it has.

It consisted a-lot of greenery and plants

i really like how beautiful this photo is- my whole shoot was focused on windows and i think this photo is the perfect example of an escape in the darkness. I took this photo on my knees and tilted the camera upwards- so the plants and lamp were surrounding the window as if the window was hidden amongst the plants. Its also makes the photo feel like someone has t climb upwards to reach the surface which can lead to other escape ideas like 'drowning' etc.I didn't do much to light edit this photo as the sunlight naturally darkened below the camera. So i just turned the exposure down a tad bit more at the bottom

UNTOLD STORY---light edit

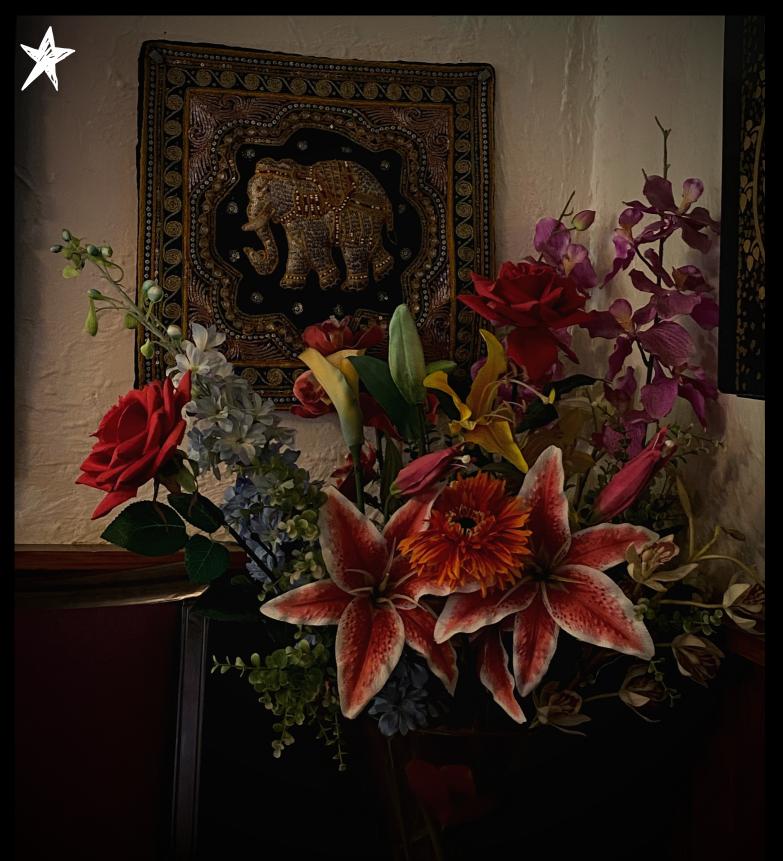

i really like this photo as it is a very different focus compared to the windows- i took this photo as i thought it worked well with the colour scheme which was very high in the theme of wood and brown as well as a-lot of greens in all the plants and scenery. What i found very interesting is the nail that is holding us this piece of art on the wall.Its strange as it makes us wonder where this art work originally came from and what is is overall meaning. This shoot also feels very cultured and there is a feeling of awe and wonder which i particularly like. It relates to the theme of windows but more of a dreamy and fantasy side- as well as the few physical photos of windows i took as i was particularly engaged by the amount of colours in this photo- I think that the new flowers really contrast with the worn down walls and old tapestries in the background. This idea is nice as it helps us bring more of a story to the photo like the dents and distinctive brush strokes into the wall and makes us wonder who has done each of these- who put each thread into the hand made tapestry. To light ed this photo i first of all cropped out the side of it so there is a more direct focus on the flowers. I then turned down the exposure on and enhanced the shadows to give it more of a old/memory sort of vibe. I am very happy with how this turned out there is not much to say about this photo as it is very direct. i took a photo of this lamp as it helps enhance the ida of 'the light in the end of the tunnel' in this shoot. i cropped out the sides of this photo and darkened the bottom so the light is a very strong focus. i really lie how this photo has turned out

SHORT ESCAPE

ABELARDO MORELL

Morell is well known in the photographic community for creating camera obscura images in various places around the world and photographing these. For example finding different rooms or buildings and projecting different sceneries hat may not necessarily fit but help portray a whole 'new universe' of photography

While his early work is portraiture and street photography, he is best known for using a camera obscura technique, where he blacks out a room save for a 3/8-inch hole that allows light to pass through and strike the surface inside where the image is reproduced upsidedown but with colour and perspective preserved.

Morell was influenced by street photographers such as Henri Cartier-Bresson and Robert Frank.

i think his work particularly relates to mind with the idea of fantasy and how a whole room can be something else if you really used your imagination

VHERE THE WILD THINGS ARE

Where The Wild Things Are is inspired by Maurice's youth, his background growing up in Brooklyn and his relationship with his parents. He intended to write about his own experiences and the people he knew, and the books became a form of self-expression for him. the book and recently made film is immense in imagination. particularly exploration of the contents of a child's imagination. Angry and hurt by his mother's punishment. As Max imagines a world he wants to live, where he's king and his parents can't tell him what to do, he builds this world around him. Max came to an understanding about himself and his reality with the power of his own fantasy and imagination. I think this really ties into my work as I am wanting to explore how people who are hurt and going through a trauma use their imagination as an escape and comfort. Some even say that max in the book may have suffered from a Brief Psychotic Break.

THE FALL

the fall is a recently developed film about a 2 girls who decide to climb a 2000 feet tall tower in remembrance of one of their husbands who died during a climbing accident. This film is particularly interesting as as they get stuck they are faced with mental challenges of how they can survive without water or food as well as learning information about the past.The whole film is all about escape which is key to my work- it helps me explore different scenarios of escape other than windows but more stereotypical views on it

WAVES

The epic emotional journey of a suburban African American family as they navigate love, forgiveness and coming together in the wake of a tragic loss.Image result for waves movie. His film underlines the fleeting nature of emotions, of how they come and go – like a tide. Whether it's love, anger or hatred, they all blend together and none of those remains forever.

the butterfly effect

the idea that small things can have non-linear impacts on a complex system. The concept is imagined with a butterfly flapping its wings and causing a typhoon. Of course, a single act like the butterfly flapping its wings cannot cause a typhoon.

the butterfly effect is a film about this young boy called Evan, he gets severe headaches that cause him to suffer blackouts. While unconscious, he is able to travel back in time and alter the past but this causes drastic changes in his present life. Originally we are introduced with his life as he knows- where he is in uni ad lives a very messy life with his roommate. Throughout the film we see him go through a rich life where he is friends with different people and is dating his dream childhood bestrfirend. When Evan discoverers how much power he holds he tries and fixes all his mistakes in order for everyone to have a happy life with no faults- Evan eventually realises that it is truly impossible and decides to restart his whole mission as it the best descion for all. I really; like how unique this film is it is definitely like no other. Its message is very strong and easy to imply in everyone's life. Implying that you should be very carful when making decisions and understand how important they can be towards your life- it also makes us wonder what could have happened to each of us and where your career path may have lead if you had done something else when you were a young adult etc

I felt like this film brushed upon my work slightly as Evan went through a lot of trauma in his life weather it was through his friends or adults he had a life of stress and intensity- which links to my work when talking about trauma and the processes of overcoming it. Recently in my work i have been demonstrating ways pf escape such as through windows or places of tranquil that people may go mentally as a way of feeling comfort. As Evan deditcated his time into trying to fins the 'perfect life' after suffering from trauma i think this is quite a relatable film which i really enjoy.

Shoot review

this shoot was mainly inspired by my influence 'where the wild things are' which is a book exploring life inside a child's imagination. Inside the book there is allot of strange animals in which 'max' finds comfort from. I wanted to incorporate a few animals into my shoot in order to see a different perspective of life. I took these photo with quite a large contrast between the swan and the water as I liked how the water looked like a pool of darkness- as. viewer we are unaware of what may be underneath it etc. like a hidden depth. I tried to capture the whole setting in one shoot by taking photos of the trees nearby and the type of people and overall atmospheric mood. I felt like this shoot had quite a dull black/bluesish colour to it and so i adjusted the camera settings so each of the photos came out naturally quite dark and depressing. Although this may seem 'bad' I really think it suits the life of this swan and shoot overall and I am very happy with how this turned out

journey at night

----heavy edit

journey at night is a triptych of photos including 3 different images of a swan floating on the water. I was originally only going to do one photo but i felt like having 3 made it feel more in depth and creative. To heavy edit these photos i completely drained the saturation of the photo as i wanted there to be a very clear contrast between the black background and the white swan. In order to create this pitch black background i turned up the contrast fully. As the swan is on dark water already the photo naturally made the sides and the bottom of the swan blend into the dark surroundings which i thought was really pretty. This was just an experiment at first but i felt as if my work was vey simple and i wasn't using my resources to there full extents and so this is definitely a good start with heavy editing

a dteam is a small shoot that i did when I was at a wedding venue- I ddint want to take a full shoot but I enjoyed the wholegeneral atmospheric presence of the photos. This shoot felt very related to my swan shoot as I am looking in depth about the effects of water and its peacfulness. Ti take these photos I atood on the edge of a bridge and waitd for the sun just begin to set. I wanted to show the journey of the sun from whem it is projecteing right towards the camera and then when it was hidden behind the clouds, overall I think hthis small shoot Is a nice follow up from my swan shoot and I really like how tranquil these photos are together reflections is a shoot purely based on different types of light and reflections through mirrors etc. previously i have been exploring windows and how they can be used as a metaphorical route of escape and healing. i thought that light was an also very key stereotype when talking about this sort of stuff. For this shoot I went by the classic and well known quote to 'Find the light in the darkness' therefore i kept the general atmosphere of each of the rooms very dull and proceeded to light certain areas up with different types of light to show an immediate focus point on all of the photos. The general colour scheme for this shoot is very different to my last one but I really like how my work contrasts between light and dull. I think this help represent the idea of healing and its moments of uncertainty and how I t can be difficult to overcome something traumatic. I really like how this shoot turned out and i will definitely try to use light more in my future shoots

this is one of my most obvious shoots regarding escape- i went to a train station and took different photos from different perspectives of the platform- i wanted to sow the different angles in order to show the desperation that the person is feeling in this situation this is a light edit of some pipes and wires which are attached to a wall of a bridge- this photo dosen't necessarily have much meaning but i think that the way it has been taken closeup makes it very intense and can be put into some sort of story relating to travel or t=how stuff changes over time - i named the photo twisted as i noticed that all the different pipes start straight and then break off in different directions at the top, i feel as if it teaches alot about life, represting that each of bridge to terabithia

for this light edit i was trying to recreate one of the photos i took and used in my final photos- the photo was of a woman standing at a train track waiting to catch the train- i really liked how the photo showed so much peacefulness and provided such a strong idea of escape. Which is why i wanted to go back to the same station and try and take some photos similar.

or this light edit itself I turned down the saturation completely to make it look like a journey out of the darkness into the light- it could also represent a memory or the past.

STARRY NIGHT- OVER THE RHONE, PARIS

This was one of my influences from my last Canva but . i wanted to bring it back as i felt like i dint use it as much as i should- in my work. i am trying to enhance the idea of fantasy and i think that this painting is a great representation of what i want to see in my work. This spot proved ideal for Van Gogh, as he had grown increasingly interested in the effects of light—particularly, the artificial illumination of gas lamps—at night.

To evoke the movement of the stars' energetic twinkling and glimmering reflections, he employed his characteristically energetic brushstrokes.
Though full of vibrant energy, the scene is calm; the only people present in the composition are "two colourful figurines of lovers in the foreground," and, despite its sparkling stars, the sky elicits a sense of tranquillity.

I really like this painting and throughout my next shoot I will try to use the darker shades of blue and dots of light or try and get the same effects that this photo brings out. I am really interested in using light in my work as it also mirrors my idea of widows in my trichotomary and the idea of escapism. As well as this the reflections from the light onto the lake are also very effective when talking about reflections in windows and/or mirrors.

for my next shoot i am going to move away from physically being trapped within your body and moving onto the other side of trauma- this which i spoke about in my trichochtomary. The idea of healing and fantasy. I firstly want to start simple by taking photo of sunsets and the city- wether this be a classic photography shoot i think that it clearly shows the beauty of the earth and its tranquility. I am also keen on using lots of lights in the next two shoots in order to help me look further into Windows and reflections in order to do this i will take myself to a place with lots of bright colour's and wait until the sun starts to set eg.beams of light shining through blinds in a house. A chance of escape in the darkness, coming out of the dark and into the light. The 3 photos i have put on this page are the variety of photos want to see on my shoot. I would like to use sunsets in the city and bright lights coming from windows in buildings. As well as dark monotone photos with little to no light but a feeling of tranquil and dream like.

for the shoot my main focus was to show a peaceful fantasy which is the other half of what i talked about in create. I wanted this shoot to feel blissful and have a overall atmospheric vibe of peace. I wanted to take this photos as the sun was editing so it had a dreamy tint towards it- i also wanted to capture the lights in certain areas which wouldn't be as powerful in broad daylight. As it got dark pretty quickly i also made sure to capture the sunset and the sky which shows a nice contrast between natural daylight and man made. For my next shoot i wanted to continue with this idea and show the tranquil side of lifeand the light at the end of the darkness in this case it would be a healing from a trauma). To proceed with editing these photos i want them to be less neon and fun but have more of a meaning my tinting it with a slightly errier shade.

A light edit

make peace with silence.

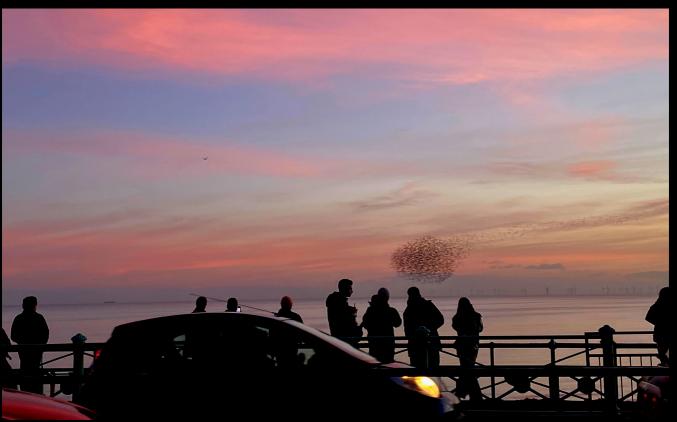

'passing cars are the only noise that disturbs the tranquility of rural life'

peace

freedom from disturbance; tranquillity.

Typically sunsets and sunrises can be very boring and common to take photos of- but i particularly felt drawn into the fact that everyone was on the side of the road in awe of the birds flying together through the sunset over the sea. I light edited this photo in a way which provided a strong focus on the darker items like the lamp- made the other items like the cars and the people into a sillouhette by turning down the exposure and sharpness which adds a-lot of sharpness to the objects moonlight blues.

What i like about this photo is how it looks like almost like a paining. This photo particularly. reminds me of an influence in my previous canva which was a paining of the sea of Galilee. By this i mean the colour schemes are very similar with very dark blues and a slight glow due to a source of light somewhere in the sky. In this case the moon. This photo was taken whilst i was in the car which meant i didn't have the opportunity to be able to provide a clear focus on the moon- this resulted in a blur and further enhanced the 'paining' fee about the image. to light edit this i turned down the exposure to enhance the silhouette of the trees

this is a very ambigous shoot based on the tranquility of nature and how its presence can show comfort and peace to ones mind-throughout my Canva i havent really looked into depth with how nature can be used as a form of escape. But I had the idea of looking into it as Almost a form of camoflage, to show this I took lots of close ups of flowers and even placing the camera in between the grass to really show this form of hiding. I also focused on showing different patterns of grass etc. to show a more abstract approach towards the shoot this is a small light edit i did to really enhance the texture of the rose at the front of the photo- to do this i did very littke but i turned up the exposure on the background of the photo to make the colour of the other flowers less distinctive but more of a blur adding to the colour scheme- the texture of the rose is very important in this shoot when showing the camouflage idea - it also adds to the abstractness of the shoot

FEEDER FOLDER

In this feeder folder i have a selection of photos from each of my shoots i have done on this Canva for the topic 'lock'. i picked out 3-4 from each which i felt stood out to me in each shoot(the ones which clearly demonstrated what i was aiming to show in the shoots) As my work is the process of healing from trauma and escapism i have a variety of photos with some being more darker and eerie and others bing more tranquil and peaceful. Each of these photos reflect either the healing, the loving, the breaking or the hurting in some way. I believe that this feeder folder shows a journey of someones life in which we can discover just through these selection of photos

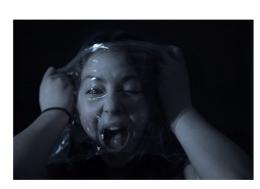

A1- broken body

broken body is a collection of photos mainly taken from the first section of my work which was 'the hurting' compared to my other folders this is one of the most obvious one when it comes to the overall theme. I have demonstrated the feeling of feeling physically trapped without your own skin- with little to no hope of escape, there is a range of dark tons amongst the photos to show this eeriness as well as some more abstract art to show life inside like your brain and body

A2-behind the glass

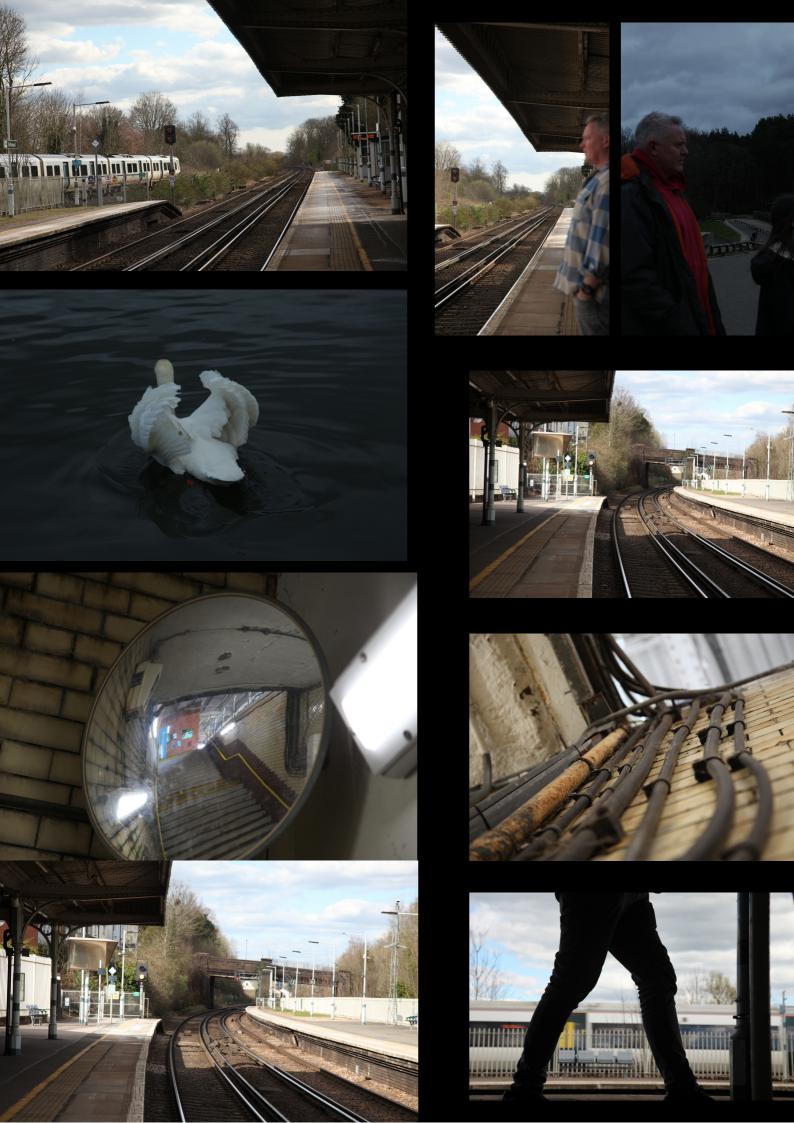

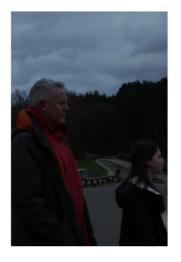

for my second a folder i have looked at light inside- by this i mean i have only taken photos with artificial beams of light, i did this in order to show the demonstration of homeliness and finding the right path. most of these photos all have a really lovely golden glow towards it which really emphasises the idea of feeling at peace with yourself and others. i really like some of the contrasting darkness in the background of some of these photos as well as it really brings out the light vividly

A3- platform 1

this folder i say is quite self explanatory- it has a lot of my photos from the shoot "platform one" which is a shoot all about physically and literally escaping from a place of discomfort. I also liked the idea of having people in this folder as it showed the numbness yet desperation of how the person is feeling before leaving- the desperation can be demonstrated in this folder by the different angles shown as if we are the person looking around trying to find a way to leave quicker

in this folder i have focused on different ways that light has been used in my shoots so far - i have varied between using artificial light and natural light as a focus point for each of the photos, although they may look different to the eye each of them are in some way able to be interpreted to be about 'the light in the darkness" in which my work was trying to reach. What should also be noted about these is that the centre of the light is the main focus point and because of its beams of light the rest of the image has been lit- giving us a well contrasted image with. a faint background

A5-mirrors image

this folder does look very similar compared to my A4 but there is a slight difference in the general idea of the grouping of these photos. Whereas A4 is focusing on light in the darkness this folder is more about being trapped and striped away from the light, each of the images are slightly hidden away from the main light source, eg the starred photo was taken behind a bowl restricting us from getting a focus on the lamp or the fact that the mirror ones are taken in a way that we can only see the light due to the fact that we have looked through a mirror and not directly in front of it for this folder i based it primely upon the colour scheme- ranging from blacks to greyish blues. As well as this each of the photos represent some sort of isolation wether its an animal or just nature itself the whole folder seems very individual which i really like *the idea of being lost in the world wether its mentally or physically- you are at a place of stillness and awe of whats around you, being caught up in the moment.

for this A folder i gathered all the images in my feeder folder that were very abstract in a way that you probably would have to pause for a second to think about what the photos are actually trying to suggest. each of them have lots of bright colours - in this case there is a lot of dominance of red. I like the reds in this folder as if is such an ambiguous colour- it can be connoted to represent blood which links to the trauma and 'breaking' part of my work- and showing it like this with ink and patterns instead of on a physical body naturally is a really effective way of implying this.

B1-short escape

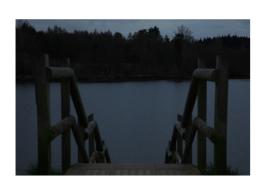

using my A1 and A2 folders i managed to pick out 8 photos that really stood out to me- unlike a lot of my other folders i wouldn't necessarily say that it has a general overall meaning about it as they re all very different - but i think that these photos next to each other very clearly represent a small storyline of escapism and summarise my work as a whole disassociation is a folder based upon the idea of feeling lost with yourself and not really having much awareness of whats around you- i have chosen to use very close up photos as its more direct to the viewers and allows a better understanding of not having a clear focus on your life and just pondering around the edges. Each of these photos stood out to me in my A3 and A4 folders for this reason.

B3-'so far away but still so near'

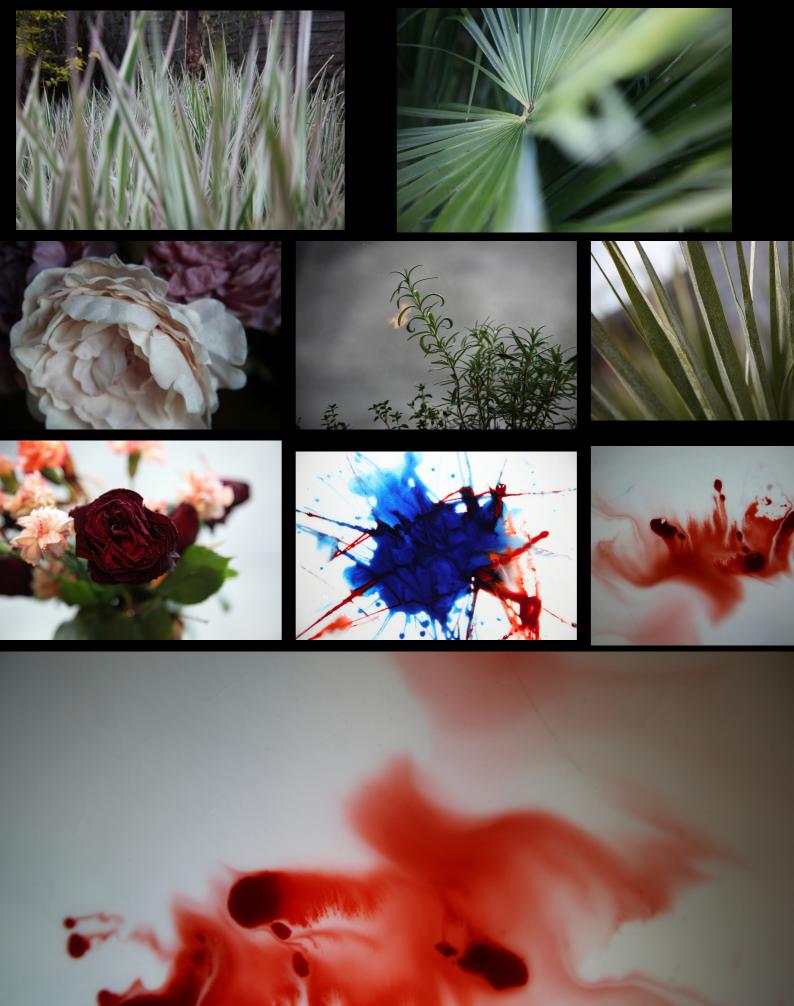

this b folder i have put together photos that reminded me of hopelessness. for example the first photo of the blinds shutting out the sun light represents the lack of reality and naturalness in the photo or the swan dipping its head in the water like its searching for something more than they already have, or even just the idea of it putting its had down in boredom. This depressive tone is a key part of my work when showing how close someone can be to finding happiness yet there is always something in the way. i kept these photos in particular as i felt like they has shown this individually.

iris is a folder in which i have joined together two very contrasting folders and put them together. i felt like my ink splattering photos would combine really well with all the flower and plant photos as they are both very abstract and different. When put together they have a very strong tranquility towards them and reminds me specifically of the beauty of nature- the idea that no matter how much of a dark place you are in nature is a world of mystery in which you can explore and find peace

in both of these folders i have picked out the photos in which have the strongest relation to my work as a whole- each of them largely contrast from each other which is beneficial as they build up a story together. i say the overall tone of these folders is generally dark and but i feel like that tone of my work is generally the best compared to the lighter photos

the reason i choose this photo as one of my finals is because i really like the uniqueness of the photo being taken through a mirror instead of just front on- i also think the lighting of the golden mirror and the light inside has such a nice warm tone and colour scheme towards it. I have decided to make it fully gloss as i think that it will help enhance the reflection from the mirror and make the bulb of light really shine through the paper- it will also help contrast the back background with the sudden burst of light in the middle which represents why i took the shoot in the first place as a way of showing a 'light in the darkness' . I Have chosen to make it one of my biggest photos as i think it needs to be bigger than smaller-as it is so detailed and has such warm colours.

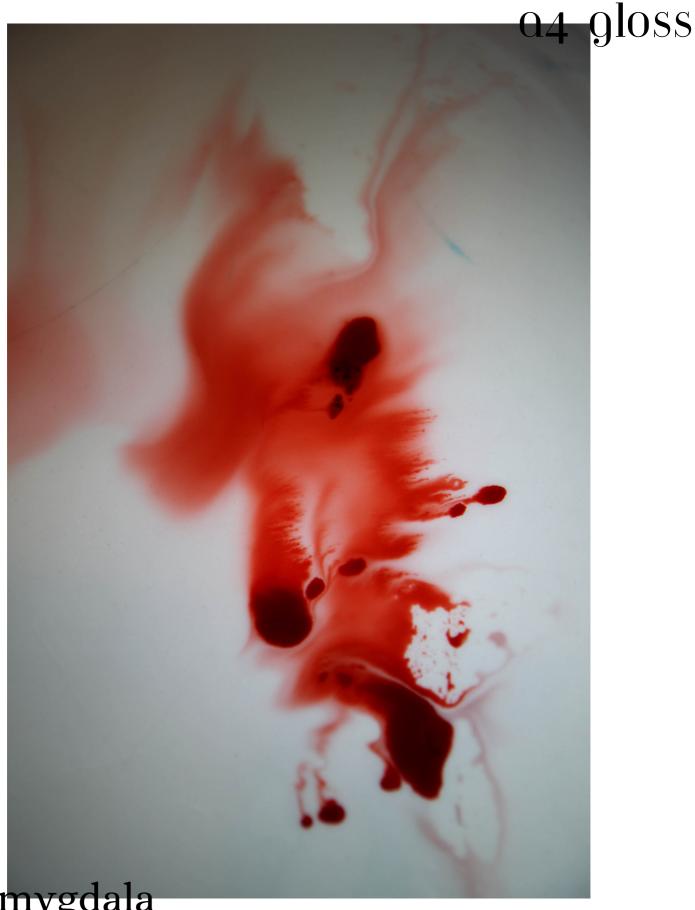

journey at night was originally a triptych of photos containing 3 different positioned photos of the swan in the lake. However i felt like having 2 was a lot more impactful to look at as it feels a lot less busy. I have chosen one with the swan facing the camera and the other with it back to the camera. I did this in order so the viewers can feel a more personal feeling towards the swan and help understand the life and isolation of these animals. I really wanted a prime focus on the swan itself and therefore heavily edited each of the photos to contrast drastically with the water below. I have chosen to make these photos glossy as it will bring out the faint glistening of the water in the background as well as making it A3 so the features and feathers of the swan don't go amygdala is a part of your brain which controls your mood and motivation levels - when i look at this photo it reminds me of chemicals and the human body- as well as the obvious, blood. I love how this photo is very abstract and doesn't have an immediate meaning to it but it just feels very impactful and has a lot of power being a bright contrasting red on a white sheet. I have made this photo all gloss to show the shininess of the white background behind it- as well as to enhance the wetness of the ink. It will make the photo seem lot more alive and this photo was one of the ones that i took and almost instantly knew that i wanted to use it in my finals. there is something about the photo which is so peaceful. compared to my other swan photos this one shows a lot more of a personality and makes us wonder what the swan is searching for or what is it trying to do?. The effect of the swan putting its head in the water makes the water ripple which i thought looked so nice on the surface of the lake. I wanted to really show this photo off in terms of quality and so i have made it A3 like the rest of the lake photos and made it glossy to show the shininess of the lake this photo compared to all my other finals is very bright and looks more 'happy'- the photo itself has a very warmths tone towards it and was part of my 'loving' section in my work and this photo portrays it very nicely- unlike the others there is a lot more going on in the photo and has is filled of different plants left right and centre. As there is so much going on i felt like it has to be printed larger than a4 to make sure you can see each and every aspect of it very clearly- i have made it glossy as it will work nicely with the texture of the window and its light shining through onto the plants

this is the second photo from the shoot 'reflections' as a whole reflections was one of my favourite shoots and i- out of all of them put the most time into thinking about how i can use my house snd turn it into a shoot involving the effects of lighting and mirrors. When i look at these photos there is an overwhelming feeling of tranquil and this one definitely stood out to me. I have however decided to make this A4 as i think that compared to the other one rom this shoot what is on the photo is a lot more straight up and bold- the mirror in isn't as outlined and so we can see straight through to the beaming light inside. Because of this beaming light i have made the photo glossy, so we can really see its reflection from the mirror

i chose this as one of my final photos as i really likes the contrast between the colour of the plant and the background- the colour scheme of this photo as a whole is very pastel which is very different compared to the other finals. i ave decided to keep this photo as A4 purely because i think its such simplistic photo that it dosen't need to be large to show its beauty. i made it glossy as it helps enhance the natural glow on the leaves of the plant and helps really see the detail of the different shades of grey in the background
