Introduction

The Pearson Edexcel Level 1/Level 2 GCSE (9–1) in English Language is designed for use in schools and colleges. It is part of a suite of GCSE qualifications offered by Pearson.

These sample assessment materials have been developed to support this qualification and will be used as the benchmark to develop the assessment students will take.
General marking guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the last candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the first.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than be penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme – not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme.
- Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate’s response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgment is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification/indicative content will not be exhaustive.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate’s response, a senior examiner must be consulted before a mark is given.
- Crossed-out work should be marked unless the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Marking guidance – specific

- The marking grids have been designed to assess student work holistically. The grids identify the Assessment Objective being targeted by the level descriptors.
- When deciding how to reward an answer, examiners should consult both the indicative content and the associated marking grid(s). When using a levels-based mark scheme, the ‘best fit’ approach should be used.
- Examiners should first decide which descriptor most closely matches the answer and place it in that level.
- The mark awarded within the level will be decided based on the quality of the answer and will be modified according to how securely all bullet points are displayed at that level.
- In cases of uneven performance, the points above will still apply. Candidates will be placed in the level that best describes their answer according to the Assessment Objective described in the level. Marks will be awarded towards the top or bottom of that level depending on how they have evidenced each of the descriptor bullet points.
- Indicative content is exactly that – it consists of factual points that candidates are likely to use to construct their answer. It is possible for an answer to be constructed without mentioning some or all of these points, as long as they provide alternative responses to the indicative content that fulfill the requirements of the question. It is the examiner’s responsibility to apply their professional judgment to the candidate’s response in determining if the answer fulfills the requirements of the question.
Advice

- Read the text before answering the questions in Section A of the question paper.
This is an extract from a short story. The narrator has murdered an old man and hidden his body under the floorboards.

The Tell-Tale Heart: Edgar Allan Poe

I then took up three planks from the flooring of the chamber, and deposited all between the scantlings*. I then replaced the boards so cleverly, so cunningly, that no human eye – not even his – could have detected any thing wrong. There was nothing to wash out – no stain of any kind – no blood-spot whatever. I had been too wary for that. A tub had caught all – ha! ha!

When I had made an end of these labors, it was four o'clock – still dark as midnight. As the bell sounded the hour, there came a knocking at the street door. I went down to open it with a light heart, for what had I now to fear? There entered three men, who introduced themselves, with perfect suavity, as officers of the police. A shriek had been heard by a neighbour during the night; suspicion of foul play had been aroused; information had been lodged at the police office, and they (the officers) had been deputed to search the premises.

I smiled, for what had I to fear? I bade the gentlemen welcome. The shriek, I said, was my own in a dream. The old man, I mentioned, was absent in the country. I took my visitors all over the house. I bade them search – search well. I led them, at length, to his chamber. I showed them his treasures, secure, undisturbed. In the enthusiasm of my confidence, I brought chairs into the room, and desired them here to rest from their fatigues, while I myself, in the wild audacity of my perfect triumph, placed my own seat upon the very spot beneath which reposed the corpse of the victim.

The officers were satisfied. My manner had convinced them. I was singularly at ease. They sat, and while I answered cheerily, they chatted of familiar things. But, ere long, I felt myself getting pale and wished them gone. My head ached, and I fancied a ringing in my ears: but still they sat and still chatted. The ringing became more distinct: it continued and became more distinct: I talked more freely to get rid of the feeling: but it continued and gained definiteness – until, at length, I found that the noise was not within my ears.

No doubt I now grew very pale; but I talked more fluently, and with a heightened voice. Yet the sound increased – and what could I do? It was a low, dull, quick sound – much such a sound as a watch makes when enveloped in cotton. I gasped for breath – and yet the officers heard it not. I talked more quickly – more vehemently; but the noise steadily increased. I arose and argued about trifles, in a high key and with violent gesticulations; but the noise steadily increased. Why would they not be gone? I paced the floor to and fro with heavy strides, as if excited to fury by the observations of the men – but the noise steadily increased. Oh God! what could I do? I foamed – I raved – I swore! I swung the chair upon which I had been sitting, and grated it upon the boards, but the noise arose over all and continually increased. It grew louder – louder – louder! And still the men chatted pleasantly, and smiled. Was it possible they heard not? Almighty God! – no, no! They heard! – they suspected! – they knew! – they were making a mockery of my horror! – this I thought, and this I think. But anything was better than this agony! Anything was more tolerable than this derision! I could bear those hypocritical smiles no longer! I felt that I must scream or die! and now – again! – hark! louder! louder! louder! louder! louder!
“Villains!” I shrieked, “dissemble no more! I admit the deed! – tear up the planks! here, here! – It is the beating of his hideous heart!”

scantlings – the beams in the foundation of a house

dissemble – pretend

Instructions

- Use black ink or ball-point pen.
- Fill in the boxes at the top of this page with your name, centre number and candidate number.
- Answer all questions in Section A and ONE in Section B.
- You should spend about 1 hour on Section A.
- You should spend about 45 minutes on Section B.
- Answer the questions in the spaces provided – there may be more space than you need.

Information

- The total mark for this paper is 64.
- The marks for each question are shown in brackets. – use this as a guide as to how much time to spend on each question.
- Questions labelled with an asterisk (*) are ones where the quality of your written communication will be assessed – you should take particular care on these questions with your use of vocabulary, spelling, punctuation and grammar, as well as the clarity of expression.

Advice

- Read each question carefully before you start to answer it.
- Check your answers if you have time at the end.
SECTION A – Reading

Read the text in the Reading Text Insert provided and answer ALL questions.

You should spend about 1 hour on this section.

Write your answers in the spaces provided.

1 From lines 1 to 5, identify the phrase which explains why there is no blood on the floor.

(Total for Question 1 = 1 mark)

2 From lines 13–19, give two ways the narrator’s behaviour shows that he is confident he will not be caught.

In responses to the following question, examiners should be aware of the different ways candidates may structure their responses. There should be sufficient evidence analysing both language and structure to reward responses. Responses that are unbalanced cannot access Level 2 or above, where analysis of both language and structure is required.

<td>Reward responses that explain how the writer uses language and structure to show the narrator’s mood changing in lines 19 to 24.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Responses may include the following points about the language of the text:
- at first the narrator just thinks about the officers and is happy they are ‘satisfied’ with his information so the focus is not on him
- he describes himself as ‘at ease’ and answering their questions cheerily which shows he is not distressed at first
- soon the strain starts to show as he asks ‘why would they not be gone?’
- the repetition of ‘still’ when referring the policemen's presence and chatter shows the situation is starting to take its toll on him
- the narrator tries to take action to make the noise go away, but his distress builds through the description of the noise becoming ‘more distinct’ and ends with him realising in horror that he can’t get rid of it
- ‘getting pale’ – this physical description shows how frightened he has become
- ‘at length’ emphasises how long this unpleasant experience is seeming to last for the narrator.

Responses may include the following points about the structure of the text:
- the use of shorter sentences at the start puts across how the narrator thinks that everything is going to end neatly, but by the end, one long sentence makes up almost half of the paragraph. It puts across his struggle to get rid of the noise
- ‘it continued’ is repeated to show that the narrator cannot escape the noise
- ‘but’ is repeated and emphasises the worsening of events
- there is a contrast between relaxed police and nervous narrator.

| 4               | Reward responses that evaluate how successfully the purpose of conveying tension is achieved. References to writer’s techniques should only be credited at level 2 and above if they support the critical judgement of the text. Responses may include:
  - the narrator’s mental state is evident throughout the extract which allows the reader to feel closer to him and experience the tension with him
  - the reader would feel that the narrator is too confident for his own good. He enjoys showing the policemen around the house as he is so certain he won’t be found out. This builds tension for the reader and they will want to find out if he does get caught
  - it is clear exactly what the narrator is thinking and feeling, and the contrast to the blissful ignorance of the policemen makes it even more tense for the reader
  - the narrator’s gradual breakdown is carefully crafted throughout the extract and by the end of the extract the narrator is consumed by his paranoia, ‘They were making a mockery of my horror!’.
  - the description of the narrator’s extreme behaviour at the end of the extract (‘I foamed – I raved – I swore!’) puts across how his feelings have been building through the extract
  - structure is manipulated in the extract and in the last but one paragraph the narrator’s loss of control chills the reader. |

| 5               | Purpose: to write a real or imagined piece about a time a person tried to hide something. This may involve a range of approaches, including: description, anecdote, speech, literary techniques.
Audience: the writing is for a general readership. Candidates can choose to write for an adult audience or an audience of young people.
Form: the response must be narrative, description or monologue. There should be organisation and structure with a clear introduction, development of points and a conclusion. Some candidates may intentionally adapt their language and style to their audience by using, for example, a more informal or colloquial approach. Candidates may introduce some literary elements.
Responses may include:
- use an example of something physically being hidden, for example hiding a secret book to prevent information being lost, or metaphorically being hidden, for example keeping information from someone
- give reasons why it was being hidden and the impact on the person hiding and being hidden from
- use appropriate techniques for creative writing, for example vocabulary, imagery, language techniques
- use a voice that attempts to make the piece interesting and believable to the chosen audience
- demonstrate particular understanding of the form used
- be written in a register and style appropriate for the chosen form, which may include colloquial elements, dialogue within description or narrative, a sustained single voice in monologue. |

Advice

- Read the texts before answering the questions in Section A of the question paper.
This text is from a newspaper article about a recruitment drive for MI6.

Psst! Want to join MI6?

As Britain’s foreign intelligence service celebrates its 100th anniversary, Neil Tweedie gets an insight into MI6’s latest recruitment drive.

Recruiting for HM Secret Intelligence Service used to be a subtle, stylish business. One afternoon in term time, a promising undergraduate at Oxford or Cambridge would find himself invited to tea with the college talent spotter.

In the quiet of an oak-panelled study, the potential recruit (right school, right family) would be subjected to gentle interrogation over crumpets, before being asked (clink of spoon on china) if he had ever considered ‘official work’. If the encounter proved satisfactory, the candidate received a letter inviting him to an interview. Fast–forward three years and there is our man in a crumpled linen suit, sitting in a Lisbon café sizing up his target, a Czech military attaché.

SIS, popularly known as MI6, Britain’s foreign intelligence service, which this year celebrates its 100th birthday, has tiptoed into the modern world. Faced with the threat of international terrorism it has had to cast its net wider than the cloisters1 of Oxbridge2 and a few other favoured universities to find recruits who look the part. That increasingly means people from the ethnic minorities.

There is a demand for more women, too. Not just bluestockings3, but the kind who know what to do with scatter cushions. Only that could explain the presence of Good Housekeeping at a recent SIS press conference held at Tate Modern in London, intended to stimulate more applications from target groups.

It was a curious affair, a rare venturing out of the shadows for serving SIS officers – but also very conventional.”Work you can believe in. Colleagues you can trust,” promised the displays. There were four of them: a historian from the Cabinet Office called Mark, a senior SIS recruiting officer called John and two younger officers, Catherine and Nick. No one asked if these were their real names but it would have been disappointing if they were. John would have stood out in a crowd — tall, elegant, forties, patrician — but Nick and Catherine were very normal. He was black, thirties, smart — typical young businessman; she was attractive, friendly, early thirties — might have been a French teacher.

The ladies from Good Housekeeping, Cosmopolitan and Marie Claire wanted lifestyle. What was it like being a spy? Could you tell your mum? Nick, a softly-spoken south Londoner, state educated and first in his family to attend university, was talent spotted 10 years ago. He could hardly not tell his wife, who worked in the City, and had informed his mother and father. But he had managed to conceal his clandestine life from his friends. Based at ‘head office’ in London, following assignments in Africa and the Middle East, Nick was initially attracted to MI6 by the chance to travel – an SIS officer may spend months in a country absorbing its culture. After joining he was ‘amazed’ how friendly it was.

“Occasionally you do work long hours. It might be midnight in the UK but it’s midday in another part of the world. But I do get to drop my daughter at nursery and pick her up.”

Catherine joined SIS nine years ago after applying for the Foreign Office. Her concern was that it might be dangerous, “but I can tell you that it’s not. The safety of staff is paramount. You are never asked to do anything you are not happy with.”

The selection process takes nine months for a successful candidate, beginning with the online application form. Applicants must be British and hold a 2:2 degree or above.

Up to 80 per cent of applicants fail the application form. Half the applicants selected for first interview fall at that hurdle, and half the remainder fail the second interview. The process continues with an assessment course. Five per cent of applicants fail personal vetting.

What kind of people do SIS want in their recruitment in-tray? “Motivated problem-solvers who do not crave the limelight. People who are good at building relationships. You may have to ask people to supply information that may place them in danger.”

Leo Marks worked in Intelligence during World War 2. He was responsible for breaking codes to uncover enemy information. In this extract he describes how a complex code was solved to uncover a secret message.

The first message was fifty letters long, the second fifty-five and the third only twenty. The first step was to take a frequency count of the individual letters, then of the pairs of letters and finally of the three-letter combinations. The girls, some of whom had come armed with German dictionaries, set about this tedious task as if they were embarking on an early-morning run. It became increasingly uphill.

The frequency count confirmed that a substitution code had been used, and it seemed safe to assume that with millions of guilders1 at stake the government-in-exile would use an unbreakable code, and I proceeded on that basis. And got nowhere.

After three days of trying every permutation I could think of, the girls had lost all confidence in me and I was pleased with their good judgement. I was now on the floor myself, with my self-esteem more crumpled than the day’s newspaper. I opened my eyes and discovered that my hand was resting on something. It was a copy of an agent’s Playfair code, an elementary system suitable for concealing brief messages in ‘innocent letters’, but for very little else. It was marginally more secure than invisible ink. But could Playfair be the answer? It would explain the lack of indicators, the frequency of the consonants and the repetition of the pairs of letters. And it was possible that the three messages had been enciphered2 on the same Playfair phrase.

I hurried in to the girls, who were less than pleased to see me. Doing my best not to stammer, I said that there was one last thing to be tried.

‘Our patience,’ one of them whispered.

I showed them how to break Playfair (it was just tricky enough to interest them) and then hurried away.

After slogging away for twenty-four hours without the slightest success the telephone rang. It was the team supervisor, but I could hardly hear what she was saying above the babble in the background. One of the girls thought she’d found a German word, but the linguist was convinced it was Dutch.

She was right.

Two hours later the messages were clear, and the cheer that went up in the code room could have been heard in the Netherlands.

TOTAL FOR SECTION A = 56 MARKS
SECTION B – Transactional Writing

Answer ONE question. You should spend about 45 minutes on this section.

Write your answer in the space provided.

EITHER

*8 Write a letter to MI6, applying for a position as an Intelligence Officer.

In your letter you could:

• state why you are interested in the position
• describe the experience and skills that make you a good candidate
• explain the difference you can make to your country

as well as any other ideas you might have.

*Your response will be marked for the accurate and appropriate use of vocabulary, spelling, punctuation and grammar.

(Total for Question 8 = 40 marks)

OR

*9 Write an article for a newspaper, exploring how technology can track our movements.

You could write about:

• the ways we are tracked, e.g. phones, computers, CCTV, supermarket scanners
• who tracks us, e.g. the police, large businesses, the government
• what the benefits are and/or what the problems could be

as well as any other ideas you might have.

*Your response will be marked for the accurate and appropriate use of vocabulary, spelling, punctuation and grammar.

</table>
| 3               | Reward responses that analyse how the article uses language and structure to interest and engage readers.

Responses may include the following points about the language of the text:
- the writer uses literary techniques such as personification to create interest in the reader. Referring to SIS as someone 'tiptoeing' into the modern world, creates a sense that they want to do it quietly and without fuss or that they are not sure about it
- the colloquial tone helps to strengthen rapport with the reader, e.g. 'Could you tell your mum?'
- the use of humour is designed to interest the reader and engage them in what is being said. It also helps to make SIS seem less secret and 'untouchable', e.g. 'the kind who know what to do with scatter cushions', 'Could you tell your mum?'
- the quotations from the officers make the job sound 'normal' and so more appealing, with references to family 'I do get to drop my daughter at nursery and pick her up' and skills many people have such as 'building relationships'
- the article contrasts the normal with the unusual – the references to family are contrasted with the references to exotic foreign travel 'Africa and the Middle East'.

Responses may include the following points about the structure of the text
- the use of short sentences at the start sets a conversational tone as if the writer is talking to the reader and telling them a secret about the types of people being recruited, e.g. 'That increasingly means people from the ethnic minorities.' and 'There is a demand for more women, too.'
- the structure of the article is used to surprise the reader and make them realise that their ideas about spies are incorrect, e.g. the opening part shows that the recruitment drive is unusual and the second part, from line 19, shows that there are particular qualities and requirements
- the use of short sentences in the section on application emphasises how difficult it is, e.g. 'Five per cent of applicants fail personal vetting'.
- the repetition of percentages and 'half' in lines 24-26 shows how hard it is to be selected and this contrasts with the idea of it being open and friendly.

| 6               | Reward responses that evaluate how successful Leo Marks’ is in his purpose of engaging the reader through his description of his relationship with ‘the girls’. References to writer's techniques should only be credited at Level 2 and above if they support the critical judgement of the text. Responses may include:
- Leo Marks uses his relationship with the girls to create a contrast between him and them. He is under pressure to give them what they need to set to work. He is ‘on the floor’ and they are tired of waiting
- Leo Marks describes the girls as losing ‘all confidence’ in him. He surprises and so engages the reader by agreeing with them. There is an entertaining banter between Leo and the girls
- Leo Marks is supposed to be the girls’ boss, but he makes it sound like they are the boss of him – he has respect for them. He is self-deprecating and this makes it funny
- Leo Marks is writing in a manipulative way to seem as though he is a really nice boss to the girls. He keeps saying nice things about them and they seem to be too assertive with him
- Leo Marks is patronising in his description of ‘the girls’, with the way he groups them all together and makes himself very separate
- the way Leo Marks keeps trying to impress the girls and failing makes the passage engaging as the interactions are playful, ‘who were less than pleased to see me.’
- one of the girls is brave enough to whisper ‘Our patience’ when Leo tells them there’s one last thing to be tried. This is amusing as it shows how cheeky they can be and perhaps explains why Leo is nervous of them. |

- both men realise the importance of being part of a team. Nick says he was 'amazed' how friendly it was and Leo says 'the cheer that went up in the code room could have been heard in the Netherlands'
- both realise the work can involve long hours. Nick says 'occasionally you do work long hours' and Leo spends more than three days on the code in the extract
- both Nick and Leo have an international focus. Nick was 'initially attracted to MI6 by the chance to travel' and Leo mentions German and Dutch.
- both Nick and Leo seem to be men who prefer to be behind the scenes. Nick says it is important to be a person who doesn't 'crave the limelight'. Leo also is more comfortable working alone and, talking to the girls, he has to do his best 'not to stammer'.

| 9               | Purpose: to write an article for a newspaper – informative and persuasive
Audience: newspaper readers. Candidates can choose which newspaper they are writing for. Some candidates may adapt their writing to suit the conventions of tabloid or broadsheet newspapers. The focus is on communicating ideas about technology. This may involve a range of approaches and should be compelling.
Form: the response should be set out effectively as an article; however, candidates may make some use of side-headings and bullet points. Credit should be given to those answers that use any stylistic conventions of a newspaper article – this may have various forms but must include a heading, an introduction to the subject, a summary of the issues or ideas being considered, and a conclusion.
Responses may include:
• comment on the ways technology can track people, e.g. through use of social networking updates, using loyalty cards means businesses can see what you buy and send you offers
• say that technology invades our lives and offer examples of how it does this, e.g. social networking, keeping in touch with friends, text messages, applications on smart phones meaning phone can be used for many different functions
• comment on who can use information shared through technology, e.g. the police can use CCTV in city centres to see what people do and where they go, tracking applications can be used by anyone to see where you are, social networking posts can be used by criminals to see when people are on holiday and burgle them
• comment on benefits, e.g. a tracking application can help if someone is lost or stranded, using technology means that supermarkets send you offers on things they know you buy or other personal anecdotes
• some candidates may give points on both benefits and problems but other candidates may take one side only. |
