General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Specific Marking Guidance

When deciding how to reward an answer, examiners should consult both the indicative content and the associated marking grid(s). When using a levels-based mark scheme, the 'best fit' approach should be used.

- Examiners should first decide which descriptor most closely matches the answer and place it in that level.
- The mark awarded within the level will be decided based on the quality of the answer and will be modified according to how securely all bullet points are displayed at that level.
- Indicative content is exactly that – they are factual points that candidates are likely to use to construct their answer.
- It is possible for an answer to be constructed without mentioning some or all of these points, as long as they provide alternative responses to the indicative content that fulfils the requirements of the question. It is the examiner's responsibility to apply their professional judgement to the candidate's response in determining if the answer fulfils the requirements of the question.

Placing a mark within a level

- Examiners should first decide which descriptor most closely matches the answer and place it in that level. The mark awarded within the level will be decided based on the quality of the answer and will be modified according to how securely all bullet points are displayed at that level.
- In cases of uneven performance, the points above will still apply. Candidates will be placed in the level that best describes their answer according to the descriptors in that level. Marks will be awarded towards the top or bottom of that level depending on how they have evidenced each of the descriptor bullet points.
- If the candidate's answer meets the requirements fully, markers should be prepared to award full marks within the level. The top mark in the level is used for work that is as good as can realistically be expected within that level.

In responses to the following question, examiners should be aware of the different ways candidates may structure their responses. There should be sufficient evidence analysing both language and structure to reward responses. Responses that are unbalanced cannot access Level 2 or above, where analysis of both language and structure is required.

Question Number	Indicative content
3	Reward responses that explain how the writer uses language and structure in the given lines to show what the narrator experiences on the night that Bobby returns home. One night, one hot night, having prayed even more heartily and tearfully, I had lain down to sleep. The windows were left open, that all possible air might reach me from the still and scented garden below. Thinking of Bobby, I had fallen asleep, and he is still mistily in my head, when I seem to wake. The room is full of clear light, but it is not morning: it is only the moon looking right in. I can see my own ghostly figure sitting up in bed, reflected in the looking-glass opposite. I listen: surely I heard some noise: yes— certainly, there can be no doubt of it—someone is knocking loudly at the hall-door. At first I fall into a deadly fear; then reason comes to my aid. If it were a robber, or person with evil intent, would he knock so openly and clamorously*? At worst it is some drunken sailor; at best, it is a messenger with news of our dear ones. At this thought I instantly spring out of bed and hurrying on whatever garments come most quickly to hand, I open my door, and fly down the passages, into which the moon is looking with her ghostly smile. As I near the door I meet our old butler. 'Who can it be, Stephens?' I ask, trembling with excitement and fear. Responses may include the following points about the language of the text: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• use of a comparative to show how much she has prayed for Bobby's implied safe return on that night: 'even more heartily and tearfully'</li> <li>• use of alliteration to suggest heightened senses: 'still and scented'</li> <li>• use of simple connectives to indicate the confusion in the narrator's mind: 'The room is full of clear light, but it is not morning'</li> <li>• use of adverbs 'surely' and 'certainly' and the phrase 'yes ... there can be no doubt of it', all of which misleadingly suggest a sense of a firm belief based</li> </ul>

	upon truth but which actually heralds a profound sense of uncertainty <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• this is also created through the use of a range of adverbs and adjectives all focused upon a lack of clarity: 'mistily', 'ghostly'</li> <li>• her initial thoughts are immediately morbid and sinister and come from the semantic field of horror: 'deadly fear', 'evil intent'</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• use of personification to create an extended metaphor of the moon as a malevolent character, seeming to enjoy the narrator's discomfiture: 'the moon is looking with her ghostly smile'</li> <li>• use of powerfully emotive language as she trembles with the contradictory emotions of 'excitement and fear'.</li> </ul> Responses may include the following points about the structure of the text: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• this section begins with language that is repeated and varied for emphasis with the suggestion of a traditional story opening</li> <li>• in the third sentence the extract shifts, mid-sentence, into the historic present tense and remains so for the rest of the extract. It is a device often used to make a narrative more graphic or immediate</li> <li>• use of a multi-clausal complex sentence structure, including the use of two colons and two dashes, creates a breathless and disjointed sense of the narrator's thought processes: 'I listen: surely I heard some noise: yes—certainly, there can be no doubt of it—someone is knocking loudly at the hall-door'</li> <li>• use of 'if', a subordinating conjunction, 'If it were a robber', creates uncertainty for the reader</li> <li>• even more so when allied with the modal auxiliary verb and rhetorical question: 'would he knock so openly and clamorously?'</li> <li>• italics are used to express her profound sense of confusion: "' Who can it be?'"</li> </ul> (6 marks)

4	Reward responses that evaluate how successfully the narrator's changing emotions are shown. References to the writer's techniques should only be credited at Level 2 and above if they support the critical judgement of the text. Responses may include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>the passage successfully creates a wide range of emotions experienced by the narrator from the bliss of the moment when they pledge their love, the sadness of leaving, the pain of separation, the initial confusion when woken, the eagerness at seeing her lover returned, her feeling of 'cold disappointment' and finally shock and consternation at his manner and appearance</li> <li>the alliterative title, 'Poor Pretty Bobby', balances the narrator's sadness and regret with her acknowledgement of her attraction towards him</li> <li>the initial bliss of the couple pledging their love to each other is literally overshadowed by the extended metaphor of the moon, a monstrous and malign influence that occurs throughout the passage, possibly suggesting that their love is doomed from the outset</li> <li>simple repetition and parallelism are used to depict the strength of their love: 'When he went he kissed me, I kissed him back again'</li> <li>single-word exclamation expresses in sound the sorrow of their parting: 'Ah!'</li> <li>use of powerful adverbs express the depth of her longing for his implied safe return: 'having prayed even more heartily and tearfully'</li> <li>some may see the garden as a linking theme, with its biblical allusions to the love between Adam and Eve, suggesting the depth of their love</li> <li>use of subordination to show how Bobby fills every waking moment for her, emphasising the totality of her love and commitment and the depth of her longing for him: 'Thinking of Bobby, I had fallen asleep'</li> <li>the deliberate shift into the present tense is used to heighten the impact of her feelings as Bobby returns: 'I had fallen asleep, and he is still mistily in my head, when I seem to wake'</li> <li>the sense of her excitement and eagerness is communicated through the speed of her actions: 'I instantly spring out of bed and hurrying on whatever garments come most quickly to hand, I open my door, and fly down the passages'</li> <li>there is a single word in italics to emphasise the extent of her confusion: "Who</li> </ul>

can it be, Stephens?"

- the extract builds her excitement and anticipation with the painfully slow opening of the door: 'It seems to me as if the endless bolts would never be drawn—the key never be turned in the stiff lock'
- there is a brief moment of bliss and elation powerfully created through emotive and religious language, multiple use of exclamation marks and the use of punctuation to create a sense of her gushing relief, before the true horror of the situation dawns upon her: 'Good heavens! What do I

	see? No drunken sailor, no messenger, but, oh joy! oh blessedness! my Bobby himself—my beautiful boy-lover!’ <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• the structure is one of profound contrast between her feelings for the Bobby that was and the Bobby that has returned</li> <li>• the passage builds to a climax through eight increasingly exasperated questions that indicate her growing sense of alarm and confusion: “‘Stay where?’ ... “‘Where have you been? What is it you are talking about?’”</li> </ul> (15 marks)
