(b) Read this extract.

Anything that draws one out of doors, draws one for a little while out of oneself, is to be commended and encouraged all possible ways. There is medicine beyond price in any one of these pastimes wisely pursued. Anything which innocently tends to reduce the excitement and irritation consequent on the high-pressure at which men and women nowadays must live, or lose ground in the hot race of life in large towns, should be met with smiles by all who love their fellow-men. Even attachment to a rustic locality³ is something. There we drink in light, and love, and health.

From the extract, identify TWO benefits of outdoor hobbies.
(2 marks)

1 _____

2 _____

(Total for Question 4 = 4 marks)

5 Read this extract.

And then for indoor hobbies – when the long evenings set in, and all without is wrapped in frost or covered with snow, how nice then to make cosy the mind with a good book – history, romance, poetry, or science, as it may be, and while the fire blazes and the lights make deep shadows in recesses and corners, to sit solitary and secure. To take the microscope and go over the specimens industriously collected in ramblings in the long summer. It may be that in a corner of a conservatory, set on a slope and the water trickling over them, you have the real thing to revive the memory of your boldest and most trying botanical enterprises when you tramped half-ankle deep in watery moss to find your specimens.
