General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Question

1	1–2	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Simple or generalised comment is offered about a consequence. [AO2]</li> <li>• Generalised information about the topic is included, showing limited knowledge and understanding of the period. [AO1]</li> </ul>
2	3–4	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Features of the period are analysed to explain a consequence. [AO2]</li> <li>• Specific information about the topic is added to support the explanation, showing good knowledge and understanding of the period. [AO1]</li> </ul>

Marking instructions

Performance in AO1 and AO2 is interdependent. An answer displaying no qualities of AO2 cannot be awarded more than the top of Level 1, no matter how strong performance is in AO1; markers should note that the expectation for AO1 is that candidates demonstrate both knowledge and understanding.

Indicative content guidance

Answers must be credited according to candidates' deployment of material in relation to the qualities outlined in the mark scheme. While specific references are made in the indicative content below, this does not imply that these must be included; other relevant material must also be credited.

Relevant points may include:

- Catholic missionaries spread Christianity to the native population of the New World. This destroyed the religious traditions practised before the arrival of the Spanish.
- The missionaries taught the native population to read and write Spanish. This spread the use of Spanish as the common language, increasing Spanish control.
- The missionaries used the existing native hierarchy to spread Christianity, by working first with powerful nobles. This meant that the rest of the population were more easily converted.
- Some missionaries, such as Las Casas, were horrified by the Spanish abuse of the native populations. As a result, these missionaries campaigned to improve the treatment of the natives.

Indicative content guidance

Answers must be credited according to candidates' deployment of material in relation to the qualities outlined in the mark scheme. While specific references are made in the indicative content below, this does not imply that these must be included; other relevant material must also be credited.

Relevant points may include:

- King Charles I of Spain wanted to find a route to the spice islands in Asia by sailing west. He therefore agreed to sponsor Magellan's voyage.
- Magellan set sail with five well-equipped ships (1519) and stopped at the Canary Islands and, later, in Brazil to stock up. This meant his ships were carrying enough provisions to last for at least a year.
- Magellan spent several months sailing down the east coast of South America, but he was unable to find a route through to the Pacific and one ship was wrecked. This led to mutiny on several ships with one ship sailing back to Spain.
- Magellan discovered a route through to the Pacific for his three remaining ships (1520). As a result, he was able to continue his voyage.

- Magellan continued to sail northwest until eventually the ships made landfall on Hononham in the Philippine islands (1521). As a result, Magellan was able to claim the Philippines for Spain.
- Magellan and his crew got involved in a battle with the native population, which led to Magellan being killed.

The importance of the conflict between the Tlaxcalans and the Aztecs for the Spanish conquest of Mexico.

Relevant points may include:

- The Tlaxcalans and the Aztecs were in a continual state of war, which meant that the Tlaxcalans were willing to provide warriors to fight alongside the Spaniards, assisting Cortes in his conquest.
- The existing division meant that Cortes, who did not have many troops with him when he invaded the Aztec empire, was able to launch a large-scale attack, due to the assistance he received from the Tlaxcalans.
- The Aztecs massacred Tlaxcalan and Spanish troops during the Night of Tears, which led to further co-operation between the Tlaxcalans and the Spanish, assisting Cortes in his conquest.
- As the Tlaxcalans were enemies of the Aztecs, they helped the Spanish to plan the siege of Tenochtitlan and its eventual capture.

The importance of the war between Atahualpa and Huascar for the Spanish conquest of the Incas.

Relevant points may include:

- Atahualpa and Huascar were fighting a war over who should rule the Incan empire when Pizarro arrived in Peru, so neither was ready to resist him, making it easier to take over.
- When Pizarro realised that the Incan empire was at war, this prompted him to exploit the division and move forward with his conquest.
- The war between the brothers led to Atahualpa having Huascar murdered to prevent him co-operating with the Spanish. This meant that the Incas were left without a leader when Atahualpa was captured by the Spanish so leaving them struggling to resist Spanish control.
- Pizarro did not have a large force, but without a clear leader, the Incas proved unable to resist the Spanish troops.
