Answer ONE question.

EITHER

1 Read the following poem.

November

We walk to the ward from the badly parked car with your grandma taking four short steps to our two.
We have brought her here to die and we know it.

You check her towel, soap and family trinkets, pare her nails, parcel her in the rough blankets 5
and she sinks down into her incontinence.

It is time John. In their pasty bloodless smiles, in their slack breasts, their stunned brains and their baldness
and in us John: we are almost these monsters.

You're shattered. You give me the keys and I drive 10 through the twilight zone, past the famous station to your house, to numb ourselves with alcohol.

Inside, we feel the terror of the dusk begin.
Outside we watch the evening, failing again,
and we let it happen. We can say nothing. 15

Sometimes the sun spangles and we feel alive.
One thing we have to get, John, out of this life.

Simon Armitage

Consider this poem carefully. Write about it as fully as you can. In planning your writing you should consider the following:

- the poet's attitude to his subject
- the poet's descriptive skills
- the language used
- the poem's effect on you
- any other aspects or unexpected features you consider to be of importance.

(Total for Question 1 = 30 marks)

OR

- 2 Look at the poems If and Prayer Before Birth in the Poetry Booklet. These poems present different thoughts about life.

With close reference to the poems, compare the ways in which each poet presents these thoughts and explain which poem you find most effective.

(Total for Question 2 = 30 marks)

OR

- 3 Compare two poems from the Poetry Booklet that present the theme of love. With close reference to the poems explain the reasons for your choice. In your answer, you may like to include some or all of the following:

- the poets' attitudes to their subjects
- the way the poets use language
- the poems' effects on you
- any other features you consider to be of importance.
