Millennium Development Goals

In 2000 The United Nations (UN) established eight Millennium Development Goals.

Sanitation is one aspect of Goal 7: to ensure environmental sustainability. It is central to human and environmental health, and essential for sustainable development, dignity and opportunity.

Sanitation and population

Sanitation is one of the major challenges facing people in many countries. According to a joint UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) and World Health Organisation report in 2013, whilst 6 billion people have mobile phones, 2.5 billion people lack access to proper sanitation.

Lack of access to proper sanitation affects 626 million people in India, 63 million in Indonesia, 40 million in Pakistan, 38 million in Ethiopia and 34 million in Nigeria. An estimated 1,400 children under the age of five die each year as a result of diarrhoea directly linked to a lack of access to safe water, proper sanitation and hygiene.

Sanitation and costs

Poor water and sanitation cost developing countries around US$260 billion a year – 1.5% of their gross domestic product (GDP). Every dollar invested in sanitation brings an average return of US$7 in avoiding health costs and gains in productivity. Globally, if universal sanitation were achieved by 2015 it would cost US$95 billion but it would save US$600 billion.

Changing attitudes towards sanitation

2.5 billion people do not have access to a toilet. The World Toilet Organisation in Singapore made 19 November 2013 the first official World Toilet Day. The UN called on the international community to help change attitudes around toilets and make sanitation a global development priority. This means encouraging people to change their behaviour and increase awareness of this issue.

3 Study Sources B, C and D.

Source B

Source C

People migrate for many different reasons. These reasons can be classified as economic, social, political or environmental:

- economic migration – moving to find work or follow a particular career path
- social migration – moving somewhere for a better quality of life or to be closer to family or friends
- political migration – moving to escape political persecution or war
- environmental causes of migration include natural disasters such as flooding

Migration will have an impact on those countries to which people migrate. These countries are referred to as 'host countries'.

The representation of women in politics

Since the 19th century, women have been successful in obtaining a vote and the right to be elected to political offices in most countries. Half of the global population is female. According to statistics from the World Bank, in 2014 women hold 22% of the seats in national parliaments and there are 9 female heads of state worldwide. They hold few other leadership positions nationally and internationally.

In some countries, traditional perceptions of women as inferior to men are maintained as a result of cultural practices. As a result, men continue to dominate women in political, economic, social, and religious life. The political achievements and the roles which women play in society are hardly recognised or acknowledged.

Reasons which prevent the participation of women include:

- education: in some countries women have less access to education than men
- patriarchy: where society is dominated by men and their concerns and priorities
- culture: where women are not expected to participate in politics
- war: women often suffer the most during and after conflict

Under international standards, men and women have an equal right to participate fully in all aspects of the political process. In practice, however, it is often harder for women to do so.
