IGCSE Religious Studies 4425/02 – Mark scheme

Section 1 – Buddhism

1) a. A wide variety of answers is possible here. A level 4 answer will choose one symbol and is likely to describe at least two ways in which this symbol is used. For example, one Buddhist symbol is a mandala. A mandala may be used as an aid to concentration; the circular shape of the mandala is used to remind Buddhists of the wholeness of the cosmos; the temporary nature of a sand mandala is a reminder of the transience of life.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

1) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: rituals associated with death help Buddhists keep a balanced view of life; one of the four signs that made the Buddha seek enlightenment was to see a funeral procession; monks may use the occasion of a funeral to teach Buddhists that life does not go on forever and to express the hope that all of the mourners will eventually reach Nirvana; rituals also serve to ease the feelings of loss and suffering for the mourners, and to bring the families together.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain cannot go beyond level 1.

2) a. Level 4 answers are likely to refer to the three groups of teaching: the Vinaya containing the rules for monastic living; the Sutta which contains most of the dhamma, in particular the Dhammapada; the Abhidhamma made up of interpretations and explanations of the teaching of the Buddha.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

2) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: in addition to spending time in study and meditation, they can follow the Buddha's teaching about performing tasks which contribute to the wider Buddhist community; they can help lay Buddhists to understand Buddhist teaching more fully; they can fulfil their duty to share the fruits of their study and meditation with others who do not have as much time to devote to these activities; they provide lay Buddhists with an opportunity to gain merit by supporting them.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain cannot go beyond level 1.

3) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline at least four such rules as: they are mainly concerned with intentions rather than simple laws; they are part of the training to be free from desire; the aim is simplicity to prevent distraction; monks should not over eat; they should not sing, dance, or attend entertainment; they should not wear jewellery, perfume or beauty products; they should not sleep in a high or wide bed; they should not handle money; they should not claim powers they do not have.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

3) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: they summarise the basic principles and values which help toward enlightenment; they are an essential part of “right action” in following the Noble Eightfold Path; they provide guidance about what Buddhists are expected to do and to avoid in their daily lives.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

4) a. A wide variety of answers is possible here but level 4 answer is likely to name a famous Buddhist and outline at least two achievements of that person. Some possible answers may include individuals such as King Ashoka Ahjan Sumedho, Aung San Sun Kyi, or the Dalai Lama.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

4) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: it is the essential guidance towards the goal to which all Buddhists aspire; it is the best example of the courage and perseverance needed to achieve spiritual enlightenment; he is the first to show others the way; the Buddha's enlightenment is often the object of meditation through which Buddhists try to follow the same path.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

5) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline that Kapilavastu was the Buddha's home city and that his father was king of the city; that it was as a young man driving through the city that he had the four sights which were eventually to lead to his enlightenment; that later in his life he returned to the city and made many converts among its citizens (including his wife and son).

At least four experiences must be outlined to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

5) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: many Buddhists believe that it helps them in their religion if they can follow in the footsteps of the Buddha and visit places where the Buddha lived and taught; visiting the stupas will aid meditation and help them in their own search for enlightenment; some Buddhists believe that by taking part in pilgrimage they will acquire merit: other Buddhists point out that pilgrimage has never been a requirement; and that meditation in any place is a better path to enlightenment than following the superstitions associated with pilgrimage.

At least two differing reasons must to be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

Section 2 – Christianity

6) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline at least four such features as: prayers and fasting during advent as a preparation for Christmas; the use of nativity scenes; alms giving; singing at carol services; christingles; midnight mass and other church services on Christmas day.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

6) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: it is a ritual which shows entry into the Christian faith; it is a sacrament; it symbolises death and new life as a Christian; for some Christians it is a public demonstration of their acceptance of the Christian faith; it is a public demonstration that a child will be brought up as a Christian; it is a sign that God is washing away a person's sins.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

7) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline at least two such differing attitudes as: in some Christian Churches there is a hierarchical structure; the laity play a limited role in the appointment of clergy; they are not involved in the administering of most sacraments: in other Churches, the laity have a significant role; they are involved in leading worship; and choose or appoint clergy.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

7) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: for Roman Catholic Christians, the Pope has authority in declaring how the Christian faith is to be interpreted and applied; the Pope is regarded as the true and authentic successor to St Peter and the representative of Christ on earth; his authority ensures that the faith which has been handed down is the only true faith; he speaks with the authority of all the bishops.

At least two reasons must to be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

8) a. Level 4 answers are likely to describe at least two such teachings contained in the Sermon on the Mount as: almsgiving should be done in secret otherwise it is in danger of becoming a hypocritical act; God sees everything that is done in secret and his reward is the only one worth having; giving of alms freely and not grudgingly is a sign of a person's heart being with God rather than with earthly treasure.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

8) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: the Ten Commandments are believed to have come directly from God and this in itself is a reason why Christians should keep them constantly in mind in their daily lives; the first commandment warns against people making their own “gods” of everyday concerns such as money and ignoring the real God; the commandments which follow after the first commandment are warnings about what kind of behaviour will follow if this first commandment is ignored and as such it is a summary of the whole Law.

At least two reasons must to be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

9) a. Level 4 answers are likely to describe at least two such teachings as: disciples are expected to “take up their cross” and be prepared to suffer as Jesus did; they must be prepared to turn away from sin and be “born again”; they may have to give up things which seem all important (the Rich Young Man); they must be prepared to put others first.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

9) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: Jesus' baptism confirms the Christian belief that Jesus was the Son of God; it confirms the Christian belief that Jesus' ministry is a reflection of God's will; it marks a starting point for the description of Jesus' ministry contained in the Gospels; it shows the humility of Jesus in allowing John to baptise him; it confirms the Christian belief in the Trinity.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain cannot go beyond level 1.

10) a. Level 4 answers are likely to describe at least two such differing attitudes as: in Roman Catholic churches the altar has an all important position as the most holy place in the church where the bread and wine become consecrated to become the body and blood of Jesus Christ; in some Protestant churches the altar may be referred to as the "holy table" and is given a less significant role, becoming a symbol and reminder of the Last Supper; in some Christian churches (such as Quakers) the altar is seen as a superstitious distraction from the true Christian message and is therefore removed completely.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

10) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: different styles of architecture may reflect different uses; modern church buildings may reflect a desire to bring Christianity back into the heart of the community by allowing church buildings to be used for other purposes such as youth clubs which require a less specific design; different views about the role of visual symbolism may result in more or less ornate architecture; different emphases on the nature of God may be reflected in church design (God as immanent or transcendent).

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

Section 3 – Hinduism

11) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline at least four such actions as: it is usually performed twice daily; it involves the circulating of an aarti plate around a person or deity; the aarti prayer is sung; hands are briefly cupped over the burning oil/ghee; palms are then raised to the forehead to transfer the blessing.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

11) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: it is one of the accepted paths to moksha; it is the most popular path followed by the majority of Hindus today; it is proclaimed in the Bhagavad Gita as the path which leads most directly to enlightenment; it is a way which may be followed by anyone irrespective of intellectual, social or religious background.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

12) a. Level 4 answers are likely to describe at least two such points as: they contain the teachings, reflections, disputes, and ideas of wise men; they contain teachings on the nature of God; they teach about the nature of the world; they contrast the temporary and changing natural world with the eternal and unchanging divine order.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

12) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: the Vedas are the oldest of the Hindu holy scriptures; Hindus believe that the Vedas came from God and they contain basic truths which can never change; the Vedas are regarded as Sruti and are a mark of orthodoxy for the six schools of teaching; the Vedas contain instructions to the priests about how worship should be carried out.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

13) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline such ways as: not causing pain to any living creature; being honest in one's dealing with others; respecting the property of others; being faithful in marriage; not being covetous or overly possessive.

At least four ways must to be outlined to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

13) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: it is the most important law code for orthodox Hindus; the laws cover most important aspects of Hindu moral and religious practice; they are highly influential in shaping modern Hindu practice.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

14) a. Level 4 answers are likely to describe at least two such aspects of Gandhi's work which show how he worked towards his goals using non-violent methods as: Gandhi resisting the pass-laws in South Africa, and organising non-violent protest marches against British policies in India (such as the 1930 salt tax); his work to reconcile Hindus and Muslims in India; his advocacy of vegetarianism; his constant appeals to his followers not to use violence.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

14) b. Level 4 answers are likely to explain that: Ramanuja emphasised the separation of the soul from Brahman and the need for the soul to be re-united through devotion; however Shankaracharya emphasised the unity of the soul with Brahman and the need for the soul to recognise Brahman through enlightenment.

Answers must refer to the teachings of both Ramanuja and Shankaracharya to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain cannot go beyond level 1.

At least two ways of marking the birth of a child must be described to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

16) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: all Muslim men are expected to attend Friday prayers unless they are unwell or travelling; during the prayers, believers have the opportunity to hear words of comfort or wisdom in the khutba from the imam; praying together gives a greater sense of community and strengthens the brotherhood; it is a requirement of faith to attend the prayers.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

17) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline at least four such aspects of the imam's role as: leading the congregation in the Friday prayers at the mosque; reading the burial prayers and overseeing the burial of the dead; performing the marriage ceremony; teaching pupils how to recite the Qur'an; giving sermons and advice to people in the community; reading the Id prayers; being a community leader.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

17) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: the Sunnah is second only to the Qur'an in authority; with the Qur'an it forms the base of Islamic law; belief in the Sunnah is part of the Islamic faith; the Prophet is the most important of all the prophets and, as such, all Muslims should try to follow his example.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

18) a. Level 4 answers are likely to state the principle that fard, mandub and mubah refer to the degree by which something is required of a Muslim, and they will then outline each category as follows: fard refers to duties which are required of all who follow Islam; mandub refers to those things which are recommended for Muslims but are not considered compulsory; mubah refers to actions which may be desirable but, again, are not compulsory.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

18) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: they are the five most important aspects of Muslim worship and belief; like pillars they support the whole of the Islamic faith; the Five Pillars provide a clear guide to all Muslims about how to keep their faith properly; they help to preserve the ummah by providing a common understanding and emphasising collective responsibility in zakat; they help to keep the soul pure.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.

19) a. Level 4 answers are likely to outline at least four such contributions as: being familiar with the teaching of the Prophet they provided spiritual guidance to the community after the death of the Prophet; Abu Bakr firmly established Zakat and salah as well as ensuring that the Qur'an was preserved in written form; Uthman ibn Affan expanded the Islamic Empire to include Iran, North Africa and Cyprus; Umar established the Islamic calendar; Ali maintained order in the Empire in the face of political chaos.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

19) b. Level 4 answers are likely to use such reasons as: the vision of the Angel Jibreel shows that the Qur'an was a revelation from Allah; the fact that the Prophet could recite in spite of his illiteracy showed a divine origin; the event confirmed the choice of Mohammad as the Prophet of Allah.

At least two reasons must be developed to reach level 4.

Other approaches are possible and must be rewarded according to the levels.

Answers which describe rather than explain will not go beyond level 1.
