Paper LEH01

  Sample Assessment Material  3
  Sample Mark Scheme  20
Instructions

- Use black ink or ball-point pen.
- Fill in the boxes at the top of this page with your name, centre number and candidate number.
- Answer all questions.
- Answer the questions in the spaces provided
  - there may be more space than you need.

Information

- The total mark for this paper is 70.
- The marks for each question are shown in brackets
  - use this as a guide as to how much time to spend on each question.

Advice

- Read each question carefully before you start to answer it.
- Keep an eye on the time.
- Try to answer every question.
- Check your answers if you have time at the end.
SECTION A

Answer ALL questions.

Some questions need to be answered with a cross in a box ✗. If you change your mind, put a line through the box ✗ and then put a cross in another box ✗.

Both texts are about how the human brain deals with fear.

Read Text 1 and answer the questions which follow.

Text 1: ‘The Human Brain’

Believe it or not, our brain is made up of three different ‘brains’, each part formed at different times in our past. 1

The reptilian brain is the primitive survival brain, and capable of only a few basic responses – such as being aggressive and on the defensive. It is not a conscious part of our brain, so controls the things we do automatically – such as when we jump at a loud noise before we actually understand what is happening. This type of immediate and automatic response is called ‘fight’ or ‘flight’. 5

The limbic system is the mid part of the brain. It is one we share with mammals and is more sophisticated than the reptilian brain. Basically, it lets information in through the senses using a structure called the thalamus. If the thalamus believes what is happening is a threat, it bypasses the thinking part of the brain and sends information (in 1000th of a second) to the amygdyla – a small structure which processes emotions such as fear, anger and pleasure. On receiving a message from the thalamus, it works like an emotional alarm system, but with no siren – just the alarm! Muscles tighten, the mouth becomes dry, adrenalin pumps into the body, pores open to release sweat and lungs expand so there is more oxygen. The heart begins to race and you feel either fear or anger as the body prepares to flee – or fight for your life. 10

The newest part of the brain is called the neocortex or new brain. It is the largest of the three brains and makes up five sixths of the entire brain. This is the clever ‘thinking’ part of the brain and can think logically. It sorts information, decides what things mean, uses language, does sums, understands science, thinks about who we are in the universe. It is what we relate to as the mind – our essential identity. 15
1 Which brain is capable of only a few basic responses? Put a cross √ in one box.

☐ A reptilian

☐ B limbic

☐ C neocortex

5  ‘This is the clever ‘thinking’ part of the brain.’

Why have quotation marks been placed around ‘thinking’? Put a cross $\square$ in one box.

- A  to show the word is not being used as it usually is
- B  to show it is a quotation
- C  to make it stand out
- D  to show it is being spoken
- E  to show it is a title

(Total for Question 5 = 1 mark)

6  Explain how the language used in the sentence below shows that the neocortex is an active brain.

‘sorts information, decides what things mean, uses language, does sums, understands science, thinks about who we are in the universe.’

(Total for Question 6 = 1 mark)

7  Why have some words in the text been put in bold? Put a cross $\square$ in one box.

- A  to make them easier to read
- B  to make them more interesting
- C  to show they are important terms
- D  to explain what they mean

(Total for Question 7 = 1 mark)
Read Text 2 ‘Have you ever been afraid?’ and answer the questions which follow.

Text 2 ‘Have you ever been afraid?’

Have you ever been afraid? Maybe thunder and lightning make your heart beat faster? Or maybe your mouth goes dry when your teacher announces a quiz, or your palms sweat when you speak in front of the class, or get butterflies in your stomach before you perform in a school play? Everyone gets scared sometimes. It’s natural.

The body’s reaction to fear is called the ‘fight or flight’ response. And people have had it since the beginning of time. Imagine you’re living 100,000 years ago — and you come face to face with a hungry saber-toothed tiger. You have two choices:

Run for it (that’s flight)

OR

Pick up your club and battle the tiger (that’s fight).

There is a final choice – to be eaten – but that doesn’t seem like such a good one!

When it’s ‘fight or flight’, you won’t feel like yourself! You could get a feeling of tightness in your chest or a stomach ache. Sometimes anxiety can interfere with things you need to do, like learning and sleeping. For some kids, feelings of anxiety or worry can happen anytime. For others, they might occur only at certain times, like when they’re leaving their home or family to go somewhere.

Some ways you can deal with it are:

• Increase your intake of carbohydrates; eat, smaller, more frequent meals; drink plenty of water and limit the intake of caffeine-loaded fizzy drinks. A diet which is lacking in protein, low in water and has excessive carbohydrates is not good for you – anxious or not!

• Take exercise. Research has proved that the hormones released into the bloodstream during exercise and during anxiety are the same. The difference is that during exercise, these hormones are utilised and not stored up in the blood. If you exercise, you can slow down stress related hormones such as adrenalin.

You’ve just got to remember that everyone has fear; it’s how we deal with it that matters...
8 Underline one sign of anxiety.

- thunder and lightning
- sleeping
- being hungry
- a dry mouth

Read Text 3, ‘A Journey Through the Human Heart’, and answer the questions which follow.

Text 3, ‘A Journey Through the Human Heart’

The writer is on a hurried visit to a Natural Science museum to see an exhibition called ‘A Journey Through the Human Heart’, when she comes across an elderly teacher standing with a snake round her neck. This is so her class can see there is nothing to be afraid of. The snake is harmless. The writer approaches the elderly teacher and her class…….

‘May I watch?’ I said.

‘Surely. This is a common grass snake. No harm at all. If they see the teacher is not afraid, the children won’t be.’

Miss Aitcheson stood rigid: she seemed to be holding her breath.

‘Teacher’s not afraid, are you?’ the attendant persisted. He leaned forward, pronouncing judgement on her, while she suddenly jerked her head and lifted her hands in panic to get rid of the snake. Then, seeing the children watching her, she whispered, ‘No, I’m not afraid. Of course not.’ She looked around her.

‘Of course not,’ she repeated sharply.

I could see her defeat and helplessness. The attendant seemed unaware, as if his perception had grown a reptilian covering.

‘See, Miss Aitcheson’s touching the snake.’ Her fingers recoiled. She touched it again.

‘See, she’s not afraid. Miss Aitcheson can stand there with a beautiful snake around her neck and touch it and stroke it and not be afraid.’

The faces of the children were full of admiration for the teacher’s bravery, and yet there was a cruelly persistent tension; they were waiting, waiting...

‘We have to learn to love snakes,’ the attendant said. ‘Would someone like to come out and stroke teacher’s snake?’

Silence.

One shamefaced boy came forward. He stood petrified in front of the teacher.

‘Touch it,’ the attendant urged. ‘It’s a friendly snake. Teacher’s wearing it round her neck, and she’s not afraid.'
The boy darted his hand forward, rested it lightly on the snake, and immediately withdrew his hand. Then he ran back to his seat. The children shrieked with delight.

‘Grownups are not afraid of them, but we can understand that when you’re small you might be afraid, and that’s why we want you to learn to love them. Who else is going to be brave enough to touch teacher’s snake?’

I wondered when the torture would end.

Suddenly the snake moved round to face Miss Aitcheson and thrust its flat head toward her cheek. She gave a scream, flung up her hands, and tore the snake from her throat and threw it on the floor, and, rushing, across the room, collapsed into a small canvas chair by the Bear Cabinet and started to cry.

Some of the children began to laugh, some to cry. The attendant picked up the snake and nursed it. Miss Aitcheson, recovering, sat exposed by this small piece of torture...

How many adults are there in the museum room?

(Total for Question 14 = 1 mark)

What type of snake does the teacher have round her neck?

(Total for Question 15 = 1 mark)

Read the following extract and answer questions 16(a) and 16(b).

‘Teacher’s not afraid, are you?’ the attendant persisted. He leaned forward, pronouncing judgement on her, while she suddenly jerked her head and lifted her hands in panic to get rid of the snake.

(a) Which word in the extract suggests the attendant has asked the teacher if she was afraid before?

(1)

(b) Which phrase in the extract suggests the behaviour of the attendant is bullying?

(1)

(Total for Question 16 = 2 marks)
17 What stops the teacher from removing the snake? Put a cross $\Box$ in one box.

- A  she does not want to appear afraid
- B  she wants the attendant to take it off
- C  she secretly likes snakes
- D  she wants the children to take it off

(Total for Question 17 = 1 mark)

18 ‘...as if his perception had grown a reptilian covering’ is a simile, comparing one thing to another. Put a cross $\Box$ in two boxes which explain what this comparison means.

- A  the attendant looks like a reptile
- B  the attendant acts like he is not aware of the teacher’s fear
- C  the attendant acts like a reptile
- D  the attendant looks like a snake
- E  the attendant acts like he is brave

(Total for Question 18 = 2 marks)

19 ‘Her fingers recoiled.’

Draw a line to the correct meaning of the word ‘recoiled’:

- shook violently
- trembled
- drew back
- shuddered

21 What is the effect of having the word ‘Silence’ on one line? Put a cross ☒ in two boxes.

☐ A it increases the tension
☐ B it tells the reader there is silence
☐ C it makes it easier to read
☐ D it makes the reader want to read on

(Total for Question 21 = 2 marks)

22 When the boy runs back to his seat, what do the children do? Put a cross ☒ in one box.

☐ A laugh
☐ B smile
☐ C dance
☐ D clap

Writing

31 Imagine that you and a friend have decided to explore an old deserted house near where you live.

Carry on with the writing below, so that you build up tension and interest for the reader. Finish on a really exciting point, so that your reader wonders what is going to happen next!

As we neared the deserted house, I suddenly felt very scared. Very scared, indeed. The night was pitch black, the only light a faint beam in the distance. We both shivered as another gust of thin wind blew through us. What lay ahead of us? Slowly, we walked towards the house...
General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.

- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.

- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.

- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.

- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate’s response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.

- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.

- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate’s response, the team leader must be consulted.

- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.
