Unit P302

Topic: The Impact of Tourism on the Studland heath Sand dunes

AO1

The aim of the Project is identified; however the basic ideas and rationale are very limited. Unfortunately one day field trips tends to be Centre driven and have an enforced lack of independence, The timescale for the journey of the Investigation is brief and there is no evidence of the decision and refining of ideas needed in deciding on the work to be carried out. Activities are logged and there is evidence of organisation

– Band 1

AO2

There is no extension here beyond a piece of Geography field work. There is no secondary research or reference to local surveys or related research. References are lacking even if pictures must be assumed to be taken by the learner. Work is illustrated graphically but there is no real data gathered and hence no ability to apply mathematical methods. The task itself has limited the marks available

– Band 1

AO3

Unfortunately this task is too brief and unsuitable for a sustained and iterative journey expected of an Investigation at level; 3. The material is however logically presented and structured. Some trends and patterns are identified but conclusions are weak and qualitative. The original aim was not either ambitious enough or closely based on secondary research. Repeat gathering of data or extended investigations are needed

– Low Band 2

AO4

A decent Presentation is evidenced which lifts the marks in this section. There is some insight and self-awareness shown and limitations are identified. Within the narrow remit of the work a decent knowledge is displayed
