

Non-aggressive team methods to separating persons fighting – “hook and turn”

When using the hook-and-turn method to separate persons fighting you should aim to turn them in such a way that they are guided/directed in opposite directions from each other. This will require both members of the team (after prior communication) to turn their respective subject either clockwise or counter-clockwise. This may not be possible or desirable in certain limited situations such as when separating persons near to a stairway or a wall.

